Senate Passes Ruml Tax Plan By 49 to 30 Vote

Backers to Demand Prompt Agreement By House to Avoid Conference Delays

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Ruml skip-a-year tax legislation scored a smashing 49-30 triumph in the Senate last night, and its backers prepared to drive home this advantage by demanding that the House join in the verdict Tuesday and send the bill to the White House.

House Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said it was "a pretty good vote."

"We hope we can get the House to accept the Senate bill right away," he said.

Present Republican plans call for avoiding, if possible, the customary conferences, in which differences between House and Senate tax bills might cause a lengthy deadlock. Administration forces which have fought the Ruml plan at every turn are expected to demand a conference between the two chambers, with the idea of seeking a compromise.

In Face of Warning

Senate adoption of the Ruml plan followed a last-minute warning by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, that it was likely to lead either to a deadlock on the tax bill, or wind up with a veto. President Roosevelt has voiced opposition to the Ruml plan as a boon to the wealthy, but its Capitol supporters are counting on his accepting it in order to achieve the withholding collection system for bringing income taxes into the Treasury.

Except for technicalities, the chief difference between the Senate and House bills is in the distribution of income tax abatement for the upper middle and high income brackets. The Senate bill from top to bottom of the income scale gives 100 per cent abatement of the tax on 1942 or 1943 income, whichever was lower. The House bill gives 100 per cent abatement up to around the $3000 net income level (depending on the number of dependents), with declining percentages from there on up the income scale.

Both would treat income taxes already paid this year, and those remaining to be paid, in general as settlement of the liability on income received this year. Both would start collecting income taxes on July 1, by withholding regular amounts from salaries and wages, as Victory taxes are now collected. Both would inaugurate for those with more than nominal income from sources other than wages or salaries a new system of collecting income taxes currently on the basis of tentative reports on future income.

All Compromises Rejected

On the central question of abatement and who should get it, an unyielding bipartisan majority in the Senate trampled down five efforts at compromise, and indorsed the main outlines of the Ruml plan which the House has twice rejected, once by a margin of 17 votes and 10 days ago by the margin of 4 votes, 206 to 202. House Ruml supporters took the Senate decision to mean that the Ruml plan would no longer run the hazards of being

Miners Told To Change Food Tastes

MRS. PHILIP L. CROWLIE

By Christine Sadler

Workers in heavy industries are getting enough food under rationing and should "change their tastes" during the war rather than agitate for more meat, in the opinion of Mrs. Phillip L. Crowlie, the OPA's official housewife.

Although the OPA is working out provisions of supplemental rations for some heavy-industry workers, such as miners, pushed to the decision by renewed recommendations from nutrition experts and by reports that loggers in the West were threatening to quit their jobs unless more meat showed up, Mrs. Crowlie was vehement in her belief that "a war is going on and we all have to make changes."

At a press conference held in District of Columbia OPA headquarters she said that if the general meat rationing should have to be lowered as the war continues probably the heavy workers should have more than others get, "but not now."

She would like to see more cafeterias and canteens set up in industries, she said—but revealed any hopes of a Government-sponsored canteen program to enable workers to spread their rationing by eating out at least once a day are weak because the WPB has not cleared priorities for stoves and

Police Follow Map To Find Bodies of Man and Daughter

Richmond, Va., May 14 (AP).—Police, following instructions on a map mailed to Mrs. Thomas Edward Pridgeon of Richmond, today found the bodies of her estranged husband and 4-year-old daughter, Shirley, in a car parked in the West End of Richmond.

The car windows had been closed and a rubber hose extended from the exhaust into the car.

Detectives quoted Mrs. Pridgeon as saying she left her husband in Winter Park, Fla., several weeks ago and returned to Richmond with Shirley after a quarrel. She said Pridgeon followed them here Wednesday.

On Thursday he took the child to "see the sights." That was the last the mother saw of them. Today she received the letter and map which told her where they would be found, dead.

WLB Urges 6-Day Week For Miners

Directive to Lewis, Operators Suggests Compromise to Avert Work Stoppage

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Moving to avert a second general coal mine stoppage starting at midnight Tuesday, the War Labor Board yesterday directed John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and the country's coal operators to resume collective bargaining.

In a four-page "interim directive order" issued by a unanimous vote, the board hinted strongly that the parties should consider a settlement of the dispute by agreeing on a guaranteed six-day work week —possibly with a guarantee of an annual wage—along with adjustment of a number of minor demands advanced by Lewis.

By implication, the order ruled out any increases in straight time rates for the miners. However, it contained the significant observation, "A denial of increases in straight time rates does not constitute a denial of relief as to cost of living."

"If the miners have a justifiable complaint," the board said, "it might be adjusted by stricter enforcement of price ceilings and the development of an adequate rationing program to meet the miners' special problems. Steps to accomplish those results have been taken and others are in progress."

Whether the action would secure a compromise to break the present log-jam which has kept the country in a state of recurrent labor crisis since late in March was not certain in the absence of comment from Lewis, but observers predicted that the board's order would provide the basis for an extension of the present 15-day strike truce which is slated to expire on Tuesday midnight. The operators announced they would comply with the directive.

Both Parties Admonished

Rapping both parties for taking "adamant" positions, the board directed them to appear in Washington at 10 a. m. Monday to work out arrangements for the resumption of direct negotiations. Under the board's order, the parties will have to make a progress report in 10 days and submit any "wage adjustments resulting from such negotiations" to the board for approval.

The board also ordered continued production of coal and directed its special three-man panel to complete its report on the dispute "at the earliest moment consistent with a fair and complete analysis of the evidence in the case."

Presumably, the board would make use of the panel report to solve any issues not settled by collective bargaining.

Lewis was now faced once again with the question of doing what he had repeatedly refused to do in this dispute—appear before the WLB and allow the board to review any settlement. However, the mine leader, in repeated public statements condemning Government handling of the coal case, has expressed readiness to resume collective bargaining negotiations with the operators.

Victory Angle Debatable

Whether a guaranteed six-day week throughout the year would be a victory was debatable since most mines have been operating six days a week for some time. Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes made six-day operation of all the country's mines mandatory when he seized them May 1 on orders of the President as a result of the general strike called by Lewis. Production was resumed subsequently when Ickes arranged the 15-day truce.

At present, there is no "guarantee" of six days work every week of the year. Miners received pay

Laxity of Courts Hampers Vice Control, Police Charge

By Mary Spargo

Metropolitan police officials told the House District Subcommittee on Public Health yesterday that lack of cooperation on the part of Municipal Court judges hampered their efforts to control prostitution and venereal disease here.

At the last of a series of protracted hearings into health and housing conditions here, Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of police, and Roy Blick, vice squad sergeant, charged the courts with letting prostitutes, panderers and keepers of disorderly houses off with either light fines, short jail terms or releasing them on probation.

Arraignment of the Municipal Court followed shocking revelations before the committee of the extent of venereal disease here, which included testimony that there were more than 54,000 cases of syphilis in the District.

At the conclusion of the hearing, Chairman D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, announced that he was asking every District official who had testified before his committee during the series to present specific recommendations in writing for remedying situations here.

All officials have been asked to present their recommendations by next Thursday. Upon receipt of the recommendations, the committee will hold an executive session to consider them and will issue a printed report of its findings.

Recommendations are expected to deal with the following:

U. S. Winning Attu Island Battle; Allies Blast Europe in Biggest Raids; Italian Bases Pounded by Sea and Air

Fleet Bombards Pantelleria Isle; Planes Hit Naples, Sardinia, Sicily

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 14.—Allied naval units have started shelling the remaining Axis Mediterranean bases in concert with a continually intensifying aerial offensive which yesterday dealt devastating blows on Sardinia, Sicily, the Italian mainland and harbored shipping.

A British naval force, having concluded its part in blocking the sea lanes from Tunisia, turned its guns on the Italian isle of Pantelleria in the Sicilian Strait yesterday and poured at least 20 broadsides into the harbor area.

Shore batteries on the little island, lying only 45 miles east of the tip of Cap Bon, replied, but failed to do any damage, Allied headquarters announced.

Air squadrons released from support of ground troops in Africa swept out to hammer the island stepping stones of Sardinia and Sicily with all their force.

Heaviest Raid Yet on Sardinia

About 50 American Liberator bombers struck at the Sicilian harbor of Augusta, sinking or damaging approximately 20 enemy ships and starting large oil fires. Attacking from Middle East bases, the four-engined Liberators picked up their R. A. F. fighter escort over Malta and dumped nearly 250,000 pounds of explosives on Augusta Harbor.

In the heaviest raid yet on Sardinian targets, American Flying Fortresses and medium bombers smashed at Cagliari, whose port and airfield formed an important base for Axis forces in North Africa.

Escorted by Lightnings and Warhawks, the Fortresses, Mitchells and Marauders dumped tons of bombs on harbor, industrial and warehouse areas in an assault far surpassing that on Maddalena, Sardinia, two weeks ago.

One ship in the harbor was blown up and others were left burning. Large fires also were started in naval berths, oil tanks and freight yards and crewmen said the flames could be seen from a distance of 100 miles.

An official report said the attack was "considered by observers to have been the most successful of any recent raids."

British in Night Raid

The Americans shot down 9 of 30 challenging German and Italian fighters and lost only 1 of their escort planes.

Reggio Calabria, Messina, and the port of Naples were among the Italian cities pounded by Allied airmen in their furious new offensive, possibly designed to soften up southern Europe for invasion.

Yank Airmen Make 4 Separate Attacks On German, Belgian And Dutch Targets

London (Saturday) May 15 (INS). Two powerful Allied air fleets were reported headed for the continent last night and early today. The Daily Herald said two big forces crossed the southeast coast of England, one before midnight and another an hour later.

By Rice Yahner

London, May 14. — American bombers, roaring out over Europe again, struck their heaviest blow of the war today with four separate, closely coordinated attacks on naval, airfield and factory targets in Germany, Belgium and Holland.

For one record in the new series of Anglo-American raids of unprecedented scope, the United States Air Force sent out the greatest number of planes engaged in a single day.

For another, the four-engined American bombers made their deepest penetration into Europe in attacking the naval and U-boat installations of Kiel, Germany.

The American blows followed up the record operations by the R. A. F. for a single night in which some 3000 tons of bombs were showered on Berlin, the Ruhr and Czecho-Slovakia, approximately doubling the bomb load the R. A. F. had delivered on any previous night.

Over Whole of Reich

These latest and greatest aerial blows were nervously described by the Berlin radio as "armed reconnaissance over the whole territory of the Reich."

American heavy bomber formations smashed at two targets in Belgium — the former General Motors plant in Antwerp, now supplying enemy transport, and a large fighter airfield and repair depot at Courtrai.

The Netherlands target was Velzen near Haarlem. American medium bombers, operating for the first time from Britain, made successful low-level attacks on industrial targets there.

11 Bombers Missing

A communique reported 11 bombers and 4 fighters missing from the day's operations.

The United States communique said:

"Bombing results on all four attacks were good.

"American, British, Canadian and other Allied fighter squadrons supported the heavy bomber attacks on Antwerp and Courtrai.

"In the Kiel raid, the bombers were unescorted. Spitfires and Thunderbolts had many encounters and destroyed 12 enemy fighters. One formation of heavy bombers had many encounters with enemy fighters and destroyed a considerable number of them."

The 11 bombers and 4 fighters

"Reds," the little fox that unaccountably turned out to be a city slicker, yesterday was yearning wistfully for the country in the cage provided for him by Pvt. Thomas Harty of the Metropolitan Police, who found him sauntering along the fence of the old Naval Hospital at Twenty-third and E Streets Northwest late Thursday night.

Where "Reds" came from, Harty has no idea. He first saw him from the squad car in which he and his partner, P. S. O'Brien, were cruising and said: "Say, look at that cat on the fence." O'Brien looked too and said, "That's no cat; it's a 'possum."

To settle the discussion they turned around and shone a spotlight into the little animal's face, dazing him. Then they managed to catch him and Harty took him to his home at 2814½ Olive Street Northwest for his four children to see. He plans to give Reds to another member of the police force who has a farm in nearby Maryland.

"He bit me on the hand so I asked the hospital people if they ever used foxes for experimenting. They said they didn't, so I don't know where he came from. Maybe he crossed Memorial Bridge from Virginia or came out of Rock Creek Park," Harty said.

Invasion 'Time Approaching,' Churchill Says in Broadcast

He and President Planning 'As Far as Human Eye Can See'

(Text of Speech on Page 11.)

Associated Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Churchill said yesterday the time is approaching when troops concentrated in Britain will advance across the seas "for the assault on the strongholds of the enemy's power."

The British leader's intimation of an imminent continental invasion came in a radio broadcast on the occasion of the third anniversary of the British Home Guard, in which he also said he and President Roosevelt are planning "well ahead of the armies who are moving swiftly forward."

"It is no good only having one march laid out," he continued. "March after march must be planned as far as human eye can see. Design and forethought must be our guides and heralds. We owe it to the fighting troops. We owe it to the vast communities we are leading out of the dark places; we owe it to heroic Russia, to long-tormented China; we owe it to the captive and enslaved nations who beckon us on through their prison bars."

The global nature of the strategy plotting in which the Anglo-American leaders and their military advisers are engaged was emphasized, too, by the disclosure during the day of some of Mr. Churchill's activities since he arrived here last Tuesday.

The White House made known that he has conferred with T. V. Soong, the Chinese Foreign Minister, who is in the United States, and Herbert Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs. He also has talked with President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia.

The widespread belief here that the planning covers major campaigns against the Japanese was heightened by the word of the meetings with Soong and Evatt. Also adding to this opinion was publication of a message from Mr. Churchill to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. It said:

"I send you warm thanks for your message of congratulation on the great Allied victory which has crushed the last resistance of German and Italian forces in Africa. The day will come when we shall rejoice at similar feats of arms of the United Nations which will sure-

15 Men Lose Lives In Collision of 2 Army Bombers

El Paso, Tex., May 14 (AP).—The public relations office of Biggs Field, Army air base near here, announced today 15 men were killed last night in the collision of two Army bombers. One man parachuted safely.

The announcement said one plane had been cleared by the field and the other ship was coming in to a landing when the collision occurred.

Names of the casualties will not be announced until the next of kin have been notified, the public relations officer said.

Himmler Reported Sent to Aid Boris; Nazis Eye Turkey

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 14.—Adolf Hitler's strong-arm specialist, Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, was reported hurrying to Sofia tonight at the urgent call of King Boris to help keep the Bulgarians in line while German military experts strengthen defenses there against the possibility of an Allied blow in the Balkans.

The Wilhelmstrasse, meanwhile, was reported keeping the closest watch on Turkey. Travelers reaching Istanbul said the Germans also were speeding military preparations in Bulgaria—apparently for defense.

Istanbul dispatches quoted authoritative sources as saying Turkey would continue her present foreign policy "unless military events in the immediate vicinity force her hand."

Ready to Fight

The Berlin radio quoted Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu as saying Turkey, which has pacts of alliance with Britain and nonaggression with Germany, was ready and willing to fight on the side of justice in fulfillment of her obligations.

"Turkey will always stick to her obligations," the broadcast quoted the foreign minister.

The guardian of the Dardanelles long has received economic concessions from the Reich in an attempt to purchase her friendship. But the pressure of Germany's own needs has prevented her fulfilling many of her supply pacts, while the Allies continued delivering arms and planes under lend-lease to keep Turkey up to strength.

An Algiers radio broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said Nazi defenses in Bulgaria and Greece near Turkey were directed by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel. Berlin has said Rommel left Africa two months ago because of illness.

30 Billions Asked by Navy For Year Starting in July

By Ben Bassett
Associated Press Staff Writer

Congress was asked yesterday to give the Navy almost 30 billion dollars for the fiscal year beginning July 1 as the price of its preparations in the next year for the final blows against the Axis.

The largest Naval funds bill in history, offered by the House Appropriations Committee, calls for $29,463,687,198—about $230 for every person in the United States. The Navy already has received 68 billion dollars since July, 1940.

The committee reported the bill after receiving many thousands of words of testimony from naval officers on what they intend to do with the appropriation. Aircraft carriers and antisubmarine vessels figured heavily in the testimony, along with landing craft.

"To win the war in Europe," said Vice Admiral F. J. Horne, "we have to get to the Axis on the continent and whether it be via Norway, the Channel, or the various approaches in the Mediterranean, the men and equipment for obtaining such a bridgehead must be ferried for the assault by landing craft.

"To regain the numerous islands of Melanesia and Micronesia, and for the final assault on Japan, extensive plans for amphibious operations must be made and successfully executed. The retaking of Guadalcanal and the North African operations were forerunners of many more such operations to come."

Horne, vice chief of naval operations, said the "aircraft carrier has become the backbone of the

Yanks Strike Unexpectedly At Jap-Held Aleutian Isle

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

In a surprise move that changes the entire war picture in the North Pacific, American troops have landed on enemy-held Attu Island and are progressing "very satisfactorily" with the conquest of the strategic outpost.

The first Allied offensive in this part of the world—along the most direct route from the United States to Tokyo—opened Tuesday when United States forces attacked the remote Aleutian island.

Army troops landed under the cover of warships and planes, and have been battling the Japanese garrison ever since. No details have been revealed of the fighting, but Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said last night that operations were "going very satisfactorily."

Refuses Forecast

Knox would not go further than this in discussing the action and declined to predict how long it might take to overcome Jap resistance. The general opinion here, however, was that Attu would be won and possibly very quickly.

Kiska Island evidently was not involved in the sea-borne assault. The Navy reported during the day that the Jap base there had been bombed twice Thursday, apparently routine raids.

The surprise element in the attack was that Attu—and not Kiska—was attacked. For weeks it has been rather evident that an American offensive was in the making in the Aleutians.

But it was Kiska, only 72 miles from our air base on Amchitka Island, that was repeatedly bombed by American planes—as many as 15 times in one day. Japanese strength in the Aleutians was concentrated there and feverish preparations were under way to fortify the island against an expected American attack.

Attu is about 200 (statute) miles west and a bit north of Kiska, and close to the supply lines between the latter island and the nearest Japanese bases in the Kuriles.

Would Isolate Kiska

If the American attack succeeds, Kiska will be virtually isolated. Once Attu were developed into a base for patrol vessels and planes, it would be virtually impossible for Japan to supply and reinforce their remaining Aleutian base. Kiska would be squeezed between the two United States bases.

The present attack, therefore, is the initial step of a move to push the Japs entirely out of the Aleu-

Japs Post Reward Of 10,000 Yen Each On U. S. Raiders

By the Associated Press

With the United States Air Force in China, May 14.—A reward of 10,000 yen for the capture, dead or alive, of any member of the United States medium bombardment group based in China, which group has carried out more than 70 raids against Japanese bases in the last year, was offered today in a Tokyo broadcast heard here.

(The yen no longer is quoted on the foreign exchange market. Before the war it was valued at 23 cents.)

Since the recent heavy raids began on Hainan, Haiphong and Canton, the Tokyo radio has been shouting threats that the Japanese would destroy all American-Chinese airports and would wipe out Chungking, Kunming and other important Chinese cities.

The Mitchell bomber squadron, commanded by Maj. Everett Holstrom of Tacoma, Wash., one of the Tokyo bombers, was singled out in the retaliatory threats.

Members of the medium squadron, eight of whom were in on the Tokyo raid, got a big kick out of the reward offer.

Red Raiders Wreck 72 German Planes

Almost to India

British Fall Back Again In Burma

New Delhi, India, May 14.—The British command announced today that British and Indian troops had fallen back again in western Burma, this time withdrawing northward from Mungdaw, only a few miles from the fronitier of India.

Belief was expressed in well informed quarters that the British forces which crossed into Burma last December and thrust almost to Akyab, might be withdrawn from Burma altogether within the next ten days, before the onset of the monsoon rains which will make land operations almost impossible.

The British-Indian army started the advance into western Burma last December and at first did well, advancing south to Donbaik, about 17 miles from Akyab (the important port), and to Rathedaung east of the Mayu River. There the Japanese refused to budge from their positions.

Then the Japanese attacked with fresh forces. The British retreat from Rathedaung began in March, from Donbaik in April.

An American communique announced during the day that medium bombers of the Tenth U. S. Air Force had again attacked the railroad yards at Mandalay and the nearby railway bridge at Myitnge, returning safely after causing considerable damage.

Full Military Occupation of Germany Planned

London, May 14 (AP).—The Allies are determined to avoid one major mistake of the 1918 armistice, and intend to occupy Germany and Italy with their military forces, lock, stock and barrel when the final collapse comes, it was asserted today in informed quarters.

Furthermore, it was understood that during the period of military occupation the Allied leadership has decided to deal only with military authorities and only on an unconditional surrender basis.

There will be no trafficing with puppet governments brought out of the limbo to save the face of discredited regimes.

300 Freight Cars, 200 Trucks Toll of Far-Flung Attack

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), May 15.—The Red air force, attacking in the East as the Allied aerial offensive swelled in the West, destroyed 72 German planes, 300 freight cars, 200 supply trucks, and other enemy war equipment in widespread raids along the huge Russian front, it was announced early today.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the Russians lost 23 planes in three days of heavy onslaughts against key German rail points, airdromes and supply routes.

Many enemy locomotives were smashed and fuel and ammunition dumps blown up, Tass said, in raids extending from the Leningrad to the southern Ukraine sectors.

"Especially effective bombing" was on the Snezhetskaya railway station just east of Bryansk at the hinge of the Central and Southern Fronts, the agency said.

The Bryansk, Orel, Belgorod and Kharkov sectors were hard hit in the upper part of the Southern Russian Front, and the Staraya Russa, Dno, Novosokolniki and Vitebsk areas were struck on the front near the Latvian and Estonian frontiers.

In destroying German transport facilities, the Russians were pursuing the same tactics employed by the R. A. F. and American airmen in the West. Germany has been reported hard-pressed to restore her battered rolling stock upon which she depends vitally now that she has to fight a war on two or more fronts.

The midnight communique of the Soviet command, meanwhile, indicated no material change on the land front. Relentless Russian pressure was being maintained on the Kuban bridgehead.

Moscow said 200 Germans were killed in dislodging the enemy from fortified positions near Lisichansk.

16 Jap Planes Downed in Fight Over Solomons

United States fighter planes shot down 16 Japanese Zeros, the Navy reported yesterday, when a fight of about 25 of the enemy craft ventured into the southeastern Solomon Islands area.

Two more Zeros, speedy, highly maneuverable fighters, were reported probably destroyed. A Navy communique said that while five American craft were lost two pilots were saved.

The air battle took place Thursday in the vicinity of the Russell Islands, lying northwest of the main American air base on Guadalcanal. The Russells were only recently occupied by American forces and an advance air field has been constructed there.

The Navy communique said that of the 16 planes shot down 15 were accounted for by American Vought Corsair fighters, the Navy's newest type in combat.

French Bar Reprisals In Tunisia

By the Associated Press

Algiers, May 14.—French authorities announced tonight that no general measures would be taken against the 100,000 Italian nationals in Tunisia.

They will be permitted to resume normal life, and accusations alleging some of them participated with the enemy forces during the occupation will be examined individually.

The French are taking a sterner attitude toward the French in Tunisia who collaborated with the Axis, but their cases also will be dealt with individually, and no general steps will be taken. Those found guilty of treason will pay the full penalty.

The aged Bey of Tunis and his aides participated in a conference held to determine what fate should befall him. The Germans had promoted him to "king," and investigators are trying to determine to what extent he might have collaborated. It is quite possible that he may abdicate.

concerted new outbreaks actually had occurred in Sofia.

Meanwhile, embattled Dutch and Belgian patriots were reported still snarling German communications and attacking officers and men despite 43 executions.

Indications of new unrest in France were seen in the Gestapo roundup of 200 members of the Vichy government suspected of entering into secret communication with French resistance groups or Allied agents.

Moves to Kill

It was reported reliably that Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander in chief of the German navy, had moved his headquarters from Paris to Kiel because he felt unsafe in France.

Fighting French headquarters here disclosed for the first time tonight that French underground resistance groups had been brought under a central authority—the Council of French Resistance—operating in France and linked to Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The Fighting French said the council already had held its first meeting and sent a message to De Gaulle before his departure to Algeria for conversations with Gen. Henri Giraud. It was said the council made these declarations:

1. Political problems may not be excluded from the unity conversations.

2. The French people will not admit to the subordination of De Gaulle to Giraud, and they demand the speedy establishment at Algiers of a provisional government presided over by De Gaulle with Giraud as military chief.

Their "Only Leader"

3. De Gaulle "will remain for all the only leader of French resistance, whatever the result of the negotiation."

The German press discussed for the first time a prospective Allied European invasion from North Africa.

The Stockholm newspaper Allehanda reported from Berlin that Das Reich admitted "large possibilities of North Africa as an Allied invasion base, adding that it would be "asking too much" to expect Nazi submarines to halt Allied shipping across either the Atlantic or Mediterranean for invasion purposes.

Swiss dispatches said Italian schools were closing for 10 weeks to enable the government to call more youths for military service.

tians, and a necessary preliminary to any major offensive against Japan itself by this route.

First word of the landing on Attu came from a Japanese broadcast. Eight hours later, the Navy issued this brief communique:

"On May 11 United States forces landed at the Island of Attu in the Aleutians, and are now engaged with Japanese forces on the island. Details of the operations will be released when the situation clarifies."

A few hours later, Secretary Knox disclosed that the operations were progressing very satisfactorily but gave no further information except to say that our troops engaged are soldiers and not Marines which often are employed for such work.

Fog Covered Operations

Axis broadcasts said that the American landing was preceded by a warship and aerial bombardment, the usual preliminary to a landing on hostile shore. The United States forces approached the island under cover of a dense fog, the enemy said.

Although ordinarily unreliable, there was no reason to disbelieve indications from the Axis radio that our forces are winning the "severe fighting" on Attu. They spoke of "strong" and "numerically superior" United States forces being involved and used the term "crack American troops."

Secretary Knox turned off questions at his press conferences late yesterday which sought to have him compare this operation with that of Guadalcanal. In the Solomons, it will be recalled, our forces seized Guadalcanal virtually without opposition, but later had to fight a long campaign to hold it against enemy forces.

The situation is quite different here. Attu is smaller—about 20 by 35 miles in extent. It is treeless, quite mountanous and covered with ice and snow. While small Jap units presumably could dig into caves and strong points, making it difficult for them to be taken, there is nothing comparable to the tangled jungles which made conquest of Guadalcanal difficult.

Most important, there are no Japanese supporting forces within hundreds of miles of Attu except the hard-pressed troops on Kiska.

But there is every reason to believe that the Japs there will fight to the last man. Enemy forces have had since last June to prepare defenses. At that time they landed on Kiska and Attu as an apparent "consolation prize" for failing to take Dutch Harbor.

Enemy forces on Attu have been building a landing field for bombers and if the island is taken, our engineers should be able to complete it. Our big bombers would then be within range of the Jap base at Paramushira, 750 miles west in the Kurile Islands. There should be no return attacks, however, as the Nipponese have no long-range craft comparable to our Liberators and Flying Fortresses.

Attu, Kiska and Agattu—a nearby island occupied by the Japs but later abandoned—lie some 2,000 miles from Tokyo on the shortest (Great Circle) route between our West Coast and Japan.

Chief value of Aleutian bases to the enemy is as "lookout posts" from which planes and submarines can keep tab on American operations in the Alaskan area. Once they are recaptured, it would be possible for a great offensive to be secretly prepared in this area. Should air bases in Siberia become available to our forces, many believe this the best road to Tokyo.

Allies Smash 2000 Planes At Cost of 770

By the Associated Press

The Allied air forces of North Africa destroyed approximately 2000 enemy planes while losing about 770 in the six months and three days between the landings in French North Africa and the collapse of Axis resistance May 12.

The War Department reported this yesterday in a review of the spectacular part played by the Allied team under Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur W. Tedder.

It said that in the first 11 days of May alone the score was 300 Axis planes destroyed against 49 Allied aircraft lost, a ratio of 6 to 1, and added that from May 7—the day Tunis and Bizerte fell—the enemy air arm literally danced to the Allies' tune, losing approximately 11 planes for every Allied plane brought down."

In addition the department reported that the troop carrier command, operating scheduled courier planes for the transport of military personnel, mail and supplies throughout the combat zone, carried 41,417 passengers and 7430 tons of cargo through March 25.

Allies Pound Italian Bases By Sea, Air

Vesuvius against the moonlight to guide them to Naples for a night attack in which block-busters were dumped on munitions depots, oil storage and industrial areas in that Axis supply port.

Malta-based planes also swept over Sicily and the toe of the Italian boot to bomb and strafe enemy communications.

Axis planes struck at the Algiers area last night for the second night in succession but the Allied communique said five of the raiders were shot down and the others driven away. Wednesday night's attack resulted in a similar loss to the enemy. The communique reported "no casualties or damage."

The Italian high command communique broadcast from Rome said Italian planes made night raids on the harbors of Bone, Bougie, and Sfax, and reported that an Allied submarine was sunk by a German force in the Tyrrhenian Sea off the west coast of Italy.

Italians Admit Casualties

The Italians admitted casualties and damage from Allied air attacks, especially in twice-bombed Cagliari. It claimed that 12 Allied planes were downed by anti-aircraft fire and Axis fighters.

Long-range R. A. F. fighter planes sank a small vessel in the Aegean Sea and set another afire in an island harbor, the Allied command announced. A Junkers-52 float plane was shot down in the Aegean Sea. The Americans who attacked Augusta also bombed enemy seaplanes in the harbor.

Meanwhile, Allied land forces put the finishing touches on the campaign which wiped out Axis domination in Africa.

With Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim, the Axis commander, and 16 other of his generals in Allied hands, the last of the 175,000 prisoners were being placed behind barbed wire.

"No Axis forces remain in North Africa who are not prisoners in our hands," said the Allied communique. "The last remaining elements surrendered at 11:45 hours (7:45 a. m., E. W. T.), May 13."

Allied Airmen Blast Europe in Mightiest Attacks

missing constitute the Eighth Air Force's second heaviest loss. Sixteen bombers failed to return from the April 17 attack on Bremen when 63 of a heavy blanket of enemy interceptors were sent crashing to the ground.

Over Antwerp, the American airmen reported, the German fliers again tried to blast the four-engined bombers from Focke-Wulf 190's circling high overhead.

Describing this, Capt. Arthur Herbert of Cloquet, Minn., said: "I saw three Focke-Wulf 190's drop big black bombs."

The terrific pounding given today's targets underscored the promise by Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Dever, American commander for the European theater of operations, that there would be no letup in the growing Allied aerial offensives against all Europe.

Duisberg Bombed

The American blow was the latest in the nonstop night and day attacks that opened Wednesday night when the Royal Air Force dumped some 1500 tons of block-busters on Duisburg in the industrial Ruhr in the war's heaviest raid on any city. This city is a center of railway lines leading to invasion-threatened lowlands.

American heavy bombers continued the round-the-clock offensive yesterday by pounding an airplane factory at Meaulte and concentrations of planes at St. Omer in a sally just behind the French invasion coast.

The Russians joined in the aerial fray against the Nazi homeland with a raid on communications in Warsaw, capital of German-occupied Poland, Wednesday night.

The R. A. F. returned to the fight last night and early today losing 34 planes, but dropping a record of 3000 tons of explosives for the single night, 1000 tons going to the Ruhr rail center of Bochum.

The size of the load of destruction being carried to Europe is indicated by a comparison with the 7500-tons the Germans dropped on London in 94 attacks.

The medium bomber attack against Velzen was made shortly before noon, followed quickly by the heavy bomber attacks against the former General Motors plant at Antwerp and the big German airport at Courtral. This field first was pounded by American bombers last August 29.

It was the heaviest weight of bombs by far directed against Kiel. The Fortresses and Liberators made that flight without a fighter escort.

The medium bombers also made the run to Velzen without fighters.

The prime objective there was a thermal power plant which supplies most of the electric power to northern Holland. The speedy medium bombers dumped their explosives at rooftop level and obtained what they described as "good bombing results." Although there was intense flak, they had no enemy fighter opposition and suffered no losses.

Results Called Good

The Berlin radio said that "a large number" of people were killed and injured in the raids in German coastal districts and in Belgium. Berlin claimed 10 per cent of the Kiel raiders were knocked down.

The R. A. F. made secondary sweeps today. Typhoon bombers escorted by fighters attacked an enemy airfield at Tricqueville in France. Spitfires strafed enemy shipping and Mustangs of the army cooperation command destroyed an enemy fighter.

The fliers on the Velzen raid said time fuses were set long enough to permit Dutch workers to get out of the plant and the explosions were not observed.

Only slight material damage in Berlin was acknowledged by the Nazis. The R. A. F. said the western and southwestern sections of the city were raided.

Weak overnight German retaliatory thrusts against Eastern England were reported. Seven deaths were caused.

Two-Day Score In Europe Raids

In the last two days, the score of the heaviest aerial attacks in the European theater read:

Wednesday Night—British dump 1500 tons of block-busters on Duisburg, Ruhr center of many railway lines leading to Belgium and the Netherlands. Up to Wednesday, this was the greatest amount of explosives ever dropped in a night.

Thursday by Day—Americans raid Meaulte aircraft factory and St. Omer air field, with biggest number of American planes used and greatest total of bombs dropped.

Thursday Night—R. A. F. drops 3000 tons of bombs—virturally doubling the previous record for one night—on Berlin, Czecho-Slovakia and the Ruhr Valley.

Friday by Day—Army Air Force hits Kiel, Antwerp, Coutrai (Belgium) and Velsen (Holland) breaking the day-old records for both total of planes and tonnage of bombs.

House Committee Asks Discharge of 3

Appropriations Unit Would Cut Off Pay Of Named Employes

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The House was asked by its Appropriations Committee yesterday to discharge three Federal employes as being unfit for public service by reason of their "subversive" activity.

The committee at the same time quietly prepared to attempt to end the Government service of a fourth employe because of a statement he distributed to House members attacking the special Appropriations Subcommittee which exonerated him of "subversive" charges.

All four employes were listed by the Un-American Activities Committee headed by Representative Dies (Democrat of Texas. Charges brought against them were reinvestigated by the subcommittee of Representative Kerr (Democrat) of North Carolina.

Action Approved

In accordance with recommendations of the subcommittee, the full committee approved an amendment providing that none of the money in a $134,141,279 deficiency bill, or in any other appropriation measure, may be used to pay the salaries of the following:

Robert Morss Lovett, 72, Government secretary for the Virgin Islands and forme. University of Chicago English professor.

Goodwin B. Watson, $6500-a year chief analyst of the Federal Communications Commission's foreign broadcast intelligence service.

William E. Dodd, jr., of Arlington, Va., son of the late Ambassador to Germany and a $3200 assistant news editor in the intelligence service.

Another Case Involved

In the case of Frederick L. Schuman, principal political analyst of the FCC's intelligence service, the committee ordered stricken from the subcommittee's report passages declaring evidence of his "subversive" ativities to be unsufficient "to support a recommendation of unfitness to serve" the Government.

By this action the committee referred the Shuman case back to the subcommittee with the clear understanding that it expets a recommendation for Schuman's discharge to follow.

Reversal of the Schuman case was the direct result of a statement he mailed to House members. The document infuriated ardent supporters of the Dies Committee as well as outstanding House liberals.

Schuman Statement

"The condemnation of individuals through star-chamber proceedings on the basis of so-called 'public opinion' is typical of Nazi and Fascist 'justice' ans is repugnant to all that America has always stood for," Schuman told legislators.

The statement was viewed in some quarters as likely to plunge Congress into an all-out war with the Communications Commission and greatly to strengthen the hand of Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, who Thursday was formally accused by FCC Commissioner Clifford J. Durr of instigating an investigation of the FCC because of his "personal interest" and "bias."

Others Exonerated

As predicted in Friday's Post, the Kerr subcommittee exonerated two other Interior Department employes—Arthur Goldschmidt, 3036 P Street Northwest, $8000-a-year acting director of the power division, and Jack Bradley Fahy, 1042 Thirty-first Street Northwest, $5600-a-year official in the territories division.

Interior Secretary Ickes reacted to the Appropriations Committee's decision in a three-page statement in which he declared that "to brand and kick (Lovett) out of the Government in the fashion proposed would be an outrage against the Bill of Rights and a travesty on democracy."

Congress, the secretary contended, is empowered by the Constitution to remove an executive officer only by impeachment proceedings under which the accused would be prosecuted by the House and tried before the Senate.

Recalling that American-born Lovett's only son was killed at Belleau Wood in the last war, Ickes stated:

"This is no time to persecute our kindly people."

In Effect Monday

Meat Profit Reduced by OPA Order

The Nation's largest retail meat distributors were directed yesterday to hold their selling prices at least 10 per cent below the cents-per-pound ceilings which go into effect Monday for beef, lamb, veal and mutton.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown earlier had requested the larger stores to keep their ceilings at the lower levels, and yesterday made it formal by an amendment to the meat regulation.

The order requires retail stores which had an annual business of $250,000 or more last year and are members of a food organization with an annual gross volume of more than 40 million dollars in 1942 to maintain ceiling prices 10 per cent below those for Class 3 and 4 stores (multioutlet stores and supermarkets).

OPA said the order affects only a small number of large distributors and added that these stores, because of large-volume operations, would otherwise be entitled to a substantial increase, under the new price ceilings, from their present maximum prices based on March, 1942, selling prices.

Meanwhile the OPA, which had planned to institute a new ceiling price arrangement for canned and frozen fruits and vegetables next Monday discovered yesterday that it would raise some ceilings higher than retailers now charge. It thereupon called it off.

These ceilings were to have been based on a formula allowing a retailer a specific mark-up above the cost of the items to him.

A plan for similar mark-ups for wholesalers selling canned fruits, canned vegetables and baby foods likewise was revoked.

In place of the new schedule, OPA continued mark-ups which have been in effect for several months for canned vegetables and reduced mark-ups which were announced earlier this week for canned and frozen fruits.

Liquidation Of Jap Centers Being Pushed

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Concerted action toward early liquidation of confinement centers for persons of Japanese descent was announced yesterday by Dillon S. Myer, director of the War Relocation Authority, who said that experience shows the centers to be "undesirable."

"Life in a relocation center is an unnatural and un-American sort of life," he said at a press conference called primarily to clear up what he declared was apparent misunderstanding of the subject as indicated by recent criticism in Congress and elsewhere.

Calling attention to the fact that evacuees "were charged with nothing except having Japanese ancestors," Myer said he is convinced of the desirability of quickly relocating as many as possible of the approximately 110,000 persons in the centers.

The director said 40 offices already have been established throughout the country, except the West Coast, to help place loyal evacuees in suitable jobs. One of the major obstacles, he added, is emotianalism still existing in some segments of the country.

As of May, 46,032 persons were given "indefinite leave" to accept jobs outside the centers, while 4048 were granted "seasonal leave" to help with farming, he said.

Myer, in striking out at critics, declared that it is generally not known that 75 per cent of those held are American citizens.

Also taking issue with critics who have expressed impatience at the apparent lack of action in separating the "good" from the "bad" at the centers, Myer disclosed that already 155 "agitators" or pro-Japanese evacuees have been sent to special confinement centers maintained either by the Army or the Department of Justice.

"But we expect to move on a bigger scale soon against this element," Myer added, saying that the difficulty of checking all available records and information makes it impossible to proceed wholesale.

2 Forgiveness Plans Compared

The following table presents a comparison of the amount of tax forgiven by the bill passed by the House May 4 and that approved by the Senate yesterday. The Senate measure would forgive all of the lesser of the 1942 and 1943 tax, for everyone, while the House bill forgiveness would erase the 19 per cent combined normal and first surtax for all payers.

labeled a partisan project, and therefore might pick up the few extra votes needed for House approval. Administration strategists were equally convinced that House members who had twice voted against the Ruml plan would not be in any mood to vote for it, just because a Senate majority had done so.

Apparently sure of the outcome, Republicans sat back in almost unbroken silence on the last day while Democrats were trading the oratorical punches. But except for a couple of members, Republicans swung en masse against every compromise, while a Democrat, Senator Clark of Missouri, first author of a Ruml bill, delivered the knockout blows at the two leading compromise plans.

These were the suggestions of Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, Finance Committee chairman, to abate 75 per cent instead of 100 per cent of a year's tax, and Senator O'Daniel (Democrat) of Texas, to abate no taxes at all, but simply start withholding collections for present taxes.

Clark drove at the George plan with reference to telegrams sent out by an official of the National Association of Manufacturers to urge support for it. The George plan was defeated, 21 to 57. Later Clark went to work on O'Daniel's plan by charging that the latter had heard half a dozen Senators give as many different interpretations of it, and had indorsed every one. The Missourian said it reminded him of the story of a man who got on several horses and rode off in all directions at once. He forestalled a comeback from O'Daniel by demanding a quorum call, and on the next step was defeat of the O'Daniel plan, 29 to 48.

Also Discarded

Three other compromises were discarded. They included the plan of Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana to spread the 1942 tax bill over five years; the proposal of Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas to tax 1942 at 1941 rates and spread that result over three years, and of Senator Bankhead to accept the House bill abating the 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent first surtax bracket on 1942 income.

Ellender's lost, 21 to 57; Connally's lost, 29 to 50, and Bankhead's lost, 27 to 52.

Chairman George administered the death blow to the House bill proposed by Bankhead, saying that it was complicated and "most unjust" in forgiving 40 million taxpayers a hundred per cent of their 1942 liability while leaving the four million who pay 60 to 65 per cent of all the income taxes with a "heavy carryover tax." The House bill permits liabilities above the first surtax bracket to be paid as they are now in the year after the income was received.

Navy Casualties Total 23,943

The Navy announced yesterday's casualties in Navy forces, including three dead, two wounded and three missing. The list also changed the status of two men previously reported upon.

This brings to 23,943 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7215 dead, 4679 wounded and 12,049 missing.

Churchill Says Invasion Time Nears

ly drive the Jap invader from the soil of China."

President Roosevelt indicated at a press conference earlier in the day that the conferences have not yet reached the stage of making decisions. He said there was nothing helpful he could tell reporters about them because they were still in the conferring stage.

There would probably be no developments of a news nature, he added, until Mr. Churchill's visit is about over. How long the Prime Minister intends to stay here has not been revealed, and, for security reasons, of course will not be.

Mr. Roosevelt did disclose one matter which has been discussed. He said this is what to do with the large number of Axis prisoners taken in North Africa. Many probably will be brought to this country, he said, although plans are not complete.

Asked if they might be put to work at farming, the President said he thought the first problem is getting them here from Africa, which will involve a lot of shipping.

The Prime Minister's radio address was broadcast by the British Broadcasting Co., and in this country by Mutual and the Blue Network.

Still Invasion Danger

He admonished the Guardsmen that the danger of invasion had not passed, saying that "until Hitler and Hitlerism are beaten into unconditional surrender, the danger of invasion will never pass away."

He told them, too, that they must be ready to shoulder almost alone the job of defending their homeland.

"At present," he said, "we have strong armies in Great Britain and it is the assembly base for the United States Armies of liberation coming across the broad Atlantic. But this is not the end. We must prepare for the time which is approaching and will surely come, when the bulk of these armies will have advanced across the seas into deadly grapple on the continent."

As for the general situation in which England now finds itself, he said "these are great days. They are like the days in Lord Chatham's time of which it was said you had to get up very early in the morning not to miss some news of victory."

Chatham, the elder William Pitt, was prime minister in the eighteenth century period when Britain broke France's holds in Canada and India.

Churchill Praised By King for Victory

London May 14 (AP).—King George VI addressed the following message today to Prime Minister Churchill:

"Now that the campaign in Africa has reached a glorious conclusion I wish to tell you how profoundly I appreciate the fact that its initial conception and successful prosecution are largely due to your vision and your unflinching determination in the face of early difficulties.

"The African campaign has immensely increased the debt that this country, indeed all the United Nations, owe to you."

Senator Barkley To Leave for Rest

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader of the Senate, will go to Hot Springs, Ark., next week for a long rest, possibly a month, Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, said today.

Barkley has been in the Navy Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., since Monday, undergoing treatment for a persistent cold, sinus condition and inflammatory rheumatism.

equipment needed for such a program.

Mrs. Crowlie returned Thursday from a trip to the West Coast, Chicago and Kansas City, where she made a hurried check-up on the OPA's new community dollar and cents retail ceiling prices.

She found housewives well informed about the prices and adjusted to rationing, she said. Only in Los Angeles, she said, did she find any scarcity of the basic foods. Butter is not always available for the customers of that city, she said.

"Several older women told me how much better prices are this war than during the last," she said.

Asked when OPA would have the "little book of prices" printed for the housewife, Mrs. Crowlie said, "We will not print the book, but depend upon the newspapers to print it. The housewives will clip the sheets and can carry them in their ration books."

Housewives of America are meeting the demands made of them by rationing much better than is generally realized in Washington, she declared. "I came back with a better feeling than when I went away," she added.

Republicans To Check Span Of Trade Pacts

Senate Republicans will turn their fire on the span of the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements, rather than on the life of the trade act itself, it was indicated last night.

Senator Robert A. Taft, (Republican) of Ohio said he will introduce an amendment to terminate all trade agreements under the act six months after the war's end.

Under present law trade agreements are negotiated for three-year periods. Taft said he feared "dumping" by many nations after the war ends, and declared the United States at that time should reappraise its trade policies in line with trade conditions then existing.

Lewis, Operators Told to Resume Bargaining

only when they work and stand to lose work from time to time as a result of breakdowns and other factors. A "guarantee" of some definite minimum amount of work has been sought before by the miners, but never secured.

Pointing out that present schedules call for the largest coal production in history with "a growing shortage of miners," the board stated, "it should be possible for the miners and the operators to undertake collective bargaining directed to the development of a mutually satisfactory plan by which the benefits of the six-day week could be assured to the miners."

"Such a plan," the board said, "could probably be reinforced by assurances from the Government to the operators that for an agreed period, the operators will have a market for the coal they can produce."

To date, the operators have refused to consider any guaranteed wage proposal without a Government guarantee to find a market for all the coal produced under the arrangement.

The Department of Interior has stated that a need exists for 300 days of coal mining in 1943. Bargaining could center on the number of days pay to be guaranteed, observers, pointed out.

"In this case, the board is impressed with the number of issues on which the parties should have been able to reach an agreement by the ordinary processes of collective bargaining," the board said, pointing out that it received the case without agreement on one of the 12 issues involved.

"The operators have indicated that the representatives of the miners were at fault in their seemingly adamant stand on '$2 a day, no more, no less.' But it is difficult to understand why the operators failed to advance any constructive bargaining suggestions on any of the numerous items in dispute.

"On the other hand, it is difficult to understand the insistence of the representatives of the miners on basing their demands exclusively, at least for a time, on an abandonment by the Government of its 'Little Steel' formula."

Demands by Lewis in addition to the request for a $2 a day wage increase include elimination of certain minor occupational deductions including charges for cap lamps, vacaton allowance, portal-to-portal pay, double time for Sunday among others.

Darlan's Son in U. S. As Polio Patient

Warm Springs, Ga., May 14 (INS). Presence of Alain Darlan, 28, son of the assassinated Admiral Francois Jean Darlan of France, at Warm Springs where he is undergoing treatment for infantile paralysis, was confirmed tonight.

Young Darlan was brought from Algiers to Warm Springs at the invitation of President Roosevelt, it was revealed.

Liner Normandie To Float by Fall

Ineffectual Raid Costs Japs From 16 to 22 Planes

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Saturday), May 15 (AP).—The Japanese made a costly raid yesterday on the Allied base at Oro Bay in New Guinea's famed Buna sector, sending over 20 bombers with 25 fighters, and losing between 16 and 22 planes.

Allied losses were minor both in the air and on the ground. There were no Allied fatalities. The intercepting force was about equal in size to that of the raiders.

For the second day in a row, the Allies' biggest blows were delivered at Gasmata, on the southern tip of New Britain Island above New Guinea. There was no interception.

Two-engined bombers and long-range fighters struck at the airdrome, the waterfront and installations.

Nazis Using Girl Gunners, Men Say

Phoenixville, Pa., May 14 (AP).—Several hundred American soldiers wounded or incapacitated in North Africa, some as late as April 15, are being treated at the Army's new Valley Forge General Hospital here. The latest group arrived only tonight.

Several of the men told of seeing girl gunners in Nazi bombers during the battle for Tunisia. "One of them shot down near us was a very pretty blonde," said Sergt. Victor R. Woodward of Seymour, Ind.

Wilson Aide to Stark

London, May 14 (AP).—Rear Admiral George Barry Wilson has been appointed chief of staff to Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of U. S. Naval forces in Europe, it was announced today. Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, naval attache in London, had been serving as acting chief of staff.

Plane Was Stork for Test Tube Baby

By G. B. Lal
International News Service Science Editor.

New York, May 14.—The first case of the birth of a "test-tube" baby resulting from transportation by airplane of human sperm, was revealed today.

A Canadian wartime baby, a boy now over 2 years old, blond, healthy, normal and bright, can claim as his real father only the anonymous contents of a test-tube flown 500 miles by airplane from New York City to Montreal for the artificial insemination of his mother.

Dr. Frances I. Seymour and Alfred Koerner of New York City, and Dr. David Costom of Montreal, Canada, who arranged the unique birth of this child, have just published the details in the May 15 issue of the official journal of the American Medical Association.

The Canadian woman who is the baby's mother was perfectly normal but her husband was sterile. The couple wanted a child, and appealed to Dr. Costom. Legal consent forms were signed by the woman and her husband. Their names were withheld from publication in accordance with medical ethics.

From New York City the necessary biological material, human sperm, taken from a man who was most like the woman's husband in racial and physical characteristics and of unimpeachable healthy heredity, was sent by airplane.

The selected "donor" had the same color of eyes and hair as the woman's husband. He was unknown to the Canadian ouple and his identity has been kept secret.

Unusual precautions were taken to preserve the activity of the human sperm which is easily inactivated by temperature and other untoward circumstances of a 500-mile airplane flight.

Recent success of scientists in preserving human germ-cells in cold storage for long periods of time opens many possibilities for future biological experimentation.

Windsor Calls On Bahamans In N. J. Fields

Associated Press Staff Writer

Swedesboro, N. J., May 14.—Gay and chatty, the Duke of Windsor motored into the heart of south Jersey's rich farm belt today, spent two hours in shacks and in the fields talking man-to-man with migratory workers from the Bahamas, and then set our for New York again with a case of asparagus—and a new knowledge about juke boxes.

The governor general of the Bahama Islands came to inspect the Farm Security Administration's camp for Negro islanders, imported to ease the farm labor shortage. He lunched in the camp's dining hall, and while there he walked up to a juke box and said:

"What's this, a stove?"

"That's what we call a juke box," an FSA aide explained.

"Ah!" Britain's former King smiled. "So that's what they look like."

Later he visited the 25-acre farm of Sonia Swan, an opera singer, who employs 15 Bahamans in her asparagus beds. He said he planned to remain in the United States until the end of the month.

General Giraud's Daughter Called Hostage of Axis

Algiers, May 14 (AP).—Le Echo D'Alger said today that Gen. Henri Giraud's daughter and his grandchildren had been taken to Germany from Tunisia as hostages before capitulation of the Axis armies.

Giraud's daughter is the wife of a colonel in the French Army. She and her children had remained in Tunis under the German occupation while her husband was engaged in the fighting.

Planes Speeded To Europe From Far North Base

By Pilot Officer W. A. Shields
Royal Canadian Air Force
(Distributed by International News Service)

Somewhere in Labrador, May 14. In this bleak part of Labrador, far to the north of normal peacetime transatlantic flight routes, lies the largest airport in the world—a strategic R. C. A. F. development which has cost approximately 15 million dollars to date. And it is still growing.

It is built on a sand plateau towering 70 feet above surrounding swamp and muskeg. Runways are more than a mile long, enough for air giants like Lancasters, Stratoliners, and Flying Fortresses. If the mammoth air expresses of the future require a longer take-off, the runways can easily be lengthened, for the shelf of sand left behind by some ancient sea is flat as a board.

Wholesale Servicing

In one crowded 24 hours it has serviced more than 100 aircraft, fed the crews, and sent them winging on their way to Europe. In little more than a year of active operation, the station has gased and oiled more planes than go through any other ferry aerodrome on the North Atlantic seaboard.

Officers of the R. C. A. F., the R. A. F. ferry command, and the United States Army Air Transport Service, which share the facilities of this monster service station, estimate that its present export of planes for the battlefronts of Europe is "just a drop in the bucket." The United States Air Transport unit alone has arranged to accommodate in 1943 double the number of planes which passed through in 1942.

In addition to its advantageous location on the "great circle" air route to Europe—the shortest distance across the Atlantic—the airport has good weather virtually the whole year round.

The site was discovered by a Canadian in July, 1941, Eric (Jack) Fry, of the Dominion Geodetic Survey.

Bleak Even in April

Buildings are warmed by live steam from a central heating plant and there are ultra-modern kitchens. Yet even in the bright sunshine of late April, airmen swathed in hooded parkas clump about in "mukluks," which are waterproof Eskimo boots.

Antiaircraft guns manned by Canadian soldiers poke lean barrels out of sandbag emplacements. Bren gun carriers clank among the trees. Service personnel go about constantly armed.

The only girls on the station are four nurses in the R. C. A. F. hospital, the R. C. A. F. messing officer, a few United States nurses and 14 native girls in the laundry.

fleet," adding:

"Whether our strategy in the Pacific becomes a step-by-step reinvestment of the islands or a flank approach to Japan, we are going to need carriers and in quantity.

"The carrier, per se, is as vulnerable as it is necessary and attrition in this type is bound to be high.

"The naval battle as such—battleship against battleship, big fleet against big fleet—is out of the picture. Missions in modern naval warfare are generally accomplished by task forces. In these the cruiser plays an essential role. The ideal task force is one built around the aircraft carrier and, since the carrier is relatively inferior in armament, it is necessary that someone run interference with her. The cruiser is the ideal type for this."

Horne said naval shipbuilding will reach its peak about July 1, but "minimum acceptable requirements" for escort craft will not be met before next January 1.

Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, said losses of landing craft in some operations will run as high as 50 per cent. The Navy is seeking authorization for one million tons of small boats, about 70 per cent of the tonnage to be in landing craft.

The House voted this authorization yesterday, approving a $1,700,000,000 expenditure. Representative Bradley (Democrat) of Pennsylvania said the Navy already has constructed 1,100,000 tons of landing craft.

Approximately 30 per cent of the one million tons authorized yesterday will consist of district craft, such as tugs, oil and gasoline barges to service the fleet, lighters, and aircraft rescue boats.

Representative Vincent (Democrat) of Kentucky attempted unsuccessfully to eliminate the funds for the district craft, charging that the Navy was buying expensive yachts and using them for "entertainment purposes." The amendment was rejected by voice vote.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Chief Kibitzer' Watches Daughter Christen Ship

THE other day my daughter was invited to smash a bottle of champagne against the bow of a new Liberty ship. The ship was to be launched at the Wainwright Yard at Panama City, Fla., and the ship was to be named the S. S. Joseph M. Medill, founder of the Chicago Tribune, and my daughter's great-great-grandfather.

My daughter, reasonably competent for 17, probably could have managed the champagne-smashing without any parental advice. Nevertheless, her father thought he should go along. (Parents will be that way, of course).

I was glad I did. I had never seen a ship-launching before, and it is worth seeing. It is especially worthwhile to watch the precision teamwork with which every workman on the job goes about it. The sponsor, up above, gets the limelight; but down below goes on the work that really counts. This particular launching was in charge of Bill Tait, a Scotsman who has been launching ships ever since the year I was born.

He had the S. S. Joseph Medill scheduled to go down the ways at noon sharp. (Actually, she got restless and departed at 11:55). To prepare for this, the launching crew began at 9:30 a. m. and was given a mimeographed chart of each move to be made in the intricate job of easing the 10,000-ton freighter into the water.

Knocking Out the Blocks

THE CHART read something like this: "10:05 a. m., commence creep gauge readings. 10:10 a. m., removal of ram rails and temporary spreaders from wedge rider. 10:20 a. m., remove all shores inside launchways. 10:30 a. m., remove all shores outboard of launchways. 10:40 a. m., remove alternate keel blocks and all keel blocks aft of Fr. 156. 11:10 a. m., remove all collapsible keel blocks. 11:20 a. m., remove all collapsible bilge blocks, 11 sets per side, at time marked on bilge blocks."

I don't pretend to understand this. And I confess I couldn't understand Bill Tait's delightful Scotch brogue when he explained it to me. But I did notice that each block on which the hull rests has a number painted on the end, a number which shows the time at which a sledge hammer is to knock it out from under. This has to be done, gradually, block by block. And I was at least able to grasp the fact that if they were all to come out at once the hull would crash to the skids upon which it finally rides out to sea. Instead this careful knocking out of the blocks gently lowers the ship like a baby into its cradle.

The very last act of launching comes when four workmen with acetylene torches begin cutting through two steel plates—the cut-off plates—which hold the vessel on the ways.

Superstitious Seamen

LONG BEFORE THIS, however, the much less important, but more spectacular, ceremonies had begun on the christening platform, topside. A band, made up of shipyard workers, is playing. A preacher has blessed the ship. And the great-great-granddaughter of Joseph Medill stands breathless and excited, waiting the signal to let fly with the champagne.

In this case the young lady had heard a great deal about the superstitious fears of seamen when the champagne bottle fails to break and the ship is not properly christened. She had, in fact (though perhaps this is telling) gone out with her little brother to practice with beer bottles on the side of the house at home.

Came the launching of the Joseph M. Medill, therefore, and she was in good form. This was fortunate. For as the acetylene torches burned through the cut-off plates, the Joseph M. Medill, straining at her leash, anxious to begin carrying war goods overseas, broke her last fetters and began to move.

Southpaw Pearson swung lustily. Champagne splashed over the bow. All sailors' superstitious fears were removed as the Joseph M. Medill slid out to sea.

From Camps to Ships

ABOUT ONE YEAR AGO, late in the evening, Admiral "Jerry" Land telephoned J. A. Jones, head of the Jones Construction Co. in Charlotte, N. C., to ask if the Jones Co. could undertake the construction of a shipyard for the Government.

"We've heard from the Army about the fine job you've done in building Army camps," Admiral Land said, "and we need somebody like you."

"We don't know anything about ships," replied J. A. Jones, who is getting along in years. He went back to bed, forgot even to mention the conversation to his sons, who run the business. By accident they heard about it one week later, and that was the beginning of the Wainwright Yard at Panama City, Fla.

This one-time sleepy fishing village of 4000 is now swollen to 40,000, with a revamped transportation system carrying workers back and forth all over the county. The buses, the ferries, the extra housing, the shipyard itself—all are owned by the United States Government.

In that respect the Wainwright Yard is different from most other shipyards. It is a complete Government project, operated for the Maritime Commission by the J. A. Jones Co. Workers pay rent to the Maritime Commission, pay bus fare to the commission, even buy milk (shipped in from Wisconsin) from the Maritime Commission.

If anything like this had been attempted in the Brain Trust days of Rex Tugwell, the cry of socialism would have reverberated through the headlines—especially from the Chicago Tribune which Joseph M. Medill founded. But as far as building ships is concerned, the system works most efficiently, and the Wainwright Yard has one of the best records of the smaller shipyards.

American Teamwork

Even more unique is the fact that few people around the yard had ever built ships before. The elder Jones was telling the truth when he informed Admiral Land that his company knew nothing about ships. But like Henry Kaiser, a building contractor not a shipbuilder, the Jones Co. has proved that efficiency more than experience is what counts.

Efficient H. V. Appen, the general manager at Panama City, was a Chicago builder before he came to Florida. Broad-gauged Raymond Jones, vice president of the company, had spent most of his time building Army camps for which he received the Army-Navy E.

Moreover, most of the workmen who built the Joseph M. Medill, the Elihu Root and all the other Liberty ships along the Wainwright ways, never had built ships before. Coming from the farms and hills and fishing villages of west Florida they have gone to welding and ship-fitting schools before they began work.

However, they have performed a miracle of shipbuilding—which shows what American ingenuity can do, plus American determination and American teamwork—like the American people which didn't want a war, but are winning it. The Jonses decided if they had to build ships they could do it. They are building them.

Police Blame Jurists for Vice Situation

1. Low cost housing and slum clearance.
2. Improvement of sanitary conditions in alleys and slums.
3. Rat control, especially in view of the committee's discovery that typhus lice had been found on rats here.
4. Tuberculosis control in the District by better examinations of incoming workers.
5. Strengthening of vice regulations.
6. Suggestions that the courts here clamp heavier sentences on morals offenders.

From the mass of testimony gathered by the committee over more than six weeks it is expected that other recommendations, all in the health, housing and law enforcement fields, will be developed.

Part of Hearing Closed

Part of yesterday's hearing was closed to press and public at the request of two Army officers, Lieut. Col. James A. Casteel of the Provost Marshal's office and Maj. Harold J. Gordon of the Medical Corps, U. S. Army, who were understood to be testifying about the effect of District venereal disease conditions on the armed forces.

Only clew to their possible testimony was offered in a question put by Chairman D'Alesandro to Major Kelly at an open session later.

D'Alesandro asked Kelly if in his raids on vice dens he had ever discovered any women acting as Nazi agents to elicit information from members of visiting armed forces.

Kelly revealed that the FBI had participated in one raid. He said that all military men discovered in raids were turned over to the Army, and said he had no information about the spy angle.

Blick told the committee that in six months his vice squad had arrested 700 women, but had brought only one to court. The others were released, he said, "because we didn't have a case on them."

The charge was answered by Dr. Frederick Gillick, head of the Bureau of Venereal Disease, who said that in the cases referred to neither he nor any other member of the health department had received a call from the police.

Ray Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, warmly defended the police department, commending them on the strenuous efforts they are making to stamp out vice. He too accused the courts of "apathy."

Workers on Farms Increase in May

The Department of Agriculture announced yesterday 1,184,000 more workers on the farms May 1 than on April 1, although the total number of agricultural workers remains much below that of last year. Hired hands have left the farms in greater numbers than family workers, its report showed.

Hecht Price Case Set for Hearing Soon

The U. S. Court of Appeals yesterday set the Hecht Co. price ceiling case for hearing sometime before the June recess.

The appeal was taken by the OPA after Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court, denied pleas for a permanent injunction restraining the store from alleged violations of ceilings. The justice in his opinion found no grounds on which to base a belief there would be any further violations. At the same time he asserted the company had made every effort to meet OPA requirements and any deviation was caused by lack of time in which to put them into effect.

Spencer Gordon, attorney for The Hecht Co., said he hoped to have his brief ready in time and that the company was anxious to have the case permanently decided. OPA asked early consideration of the litigation in order to proceed with other cases.

Physical Education Demonstrated

Demonstrating the acceptance of responsibility by Negro citizens for promotion of wartime morale, a physical fitness program was presented last night at Uline Arena under sponsorship of the public schools, divisions 10-13, and the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Association of Washington.

More than 3000 participants from 50 schools were greeted by a capacity crowd, while hundreds, unable to obtain admission, were turned away. The program, through drills, games and calisthentics, demonstrated sound health, resistance to disease, muscular strength of a functional nature, good nutritional status, body development, endurance and agility, motor skills and morale.

Exercises Varied

A parade of participants was followed by mass singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," an elementary schools' conditioning drill, a gymnastic dance and jubilee by sixth grades, and "keep-fit" and victory-corps exercises by junior high school boys and girls.

Uniformed senior high school girls, trained in military precision, 3 of the 11 organized companies, presented an exhibition drill. Senior high school cadets, with rifles, demonstrated setting-up exercises. A dance of juveniles, directed by Mabel Jones Freeman, exhibited training in simple and advanced ballet technique. Body building exercises, including Danish gymnastics, were presented by Howard University coeds.

Pyramid - building by Dunbar girls, Russian dances by girls from Armstrong, and setting-up exercises by Cardozo girls drew vociferous applause, as did commando tactics by high school boys, boxing routines by Howard University students, and tumbling by the Twelfth Street "Y" team.

Obstacle Races

The program closed with obstacle races by Miner Teachers College girls and senior high school boys, and track events, including an exhibition dash by Barney Ewell and the Howard University track team, which also paced Frank Dixon, national A. A. U. champion, in an exhibition mile run. Eulace Peacock and Eugene Wright were seen in exhibition high and broad jumping.

Englebright Rites to Be Held Friday

Funeral services for Representative Harry L. Englebright (Republican), of California, who died unexpectedly Thursday, will be held Friday at Nevada City, Calif., the home of the Congressman.

The funeral party will leave Washington tomorrow. Members of the party will include Representatives Albert E. Carter (Republican), California; Clarence F. Lea, (Republican), Richard J. Welch, (Republican), John M. Costello (Democrat), Thomas F. Ford (Democrat), Alfred J. Elliott (Democrat), and Thomas Rolph (Republican), all of California, and Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan.

In the meantime Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol Hill physician, advised Congressmen to take time off to recover when they find themselves becoming ill, as an aftermath of Representative Englebright's death.

Mrs. Crosby Dies; Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Isabelle F. Crosby, 61, wife of former Representative Charles Noel Crosby, of 1519 North Adams Street, Arlington, who died on Thursday at Georgetown Hospital, will be held tomorrow at Ives funeral home at 1519 North Adams Street Arlington, at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery, Arlington.

Mrs. Crosby was born in Ohio and was educated in schools of that State.

After her marriage she moved to Meadville, Pa., where the family lived for 30 years. He husband was elected to Congress from that city and served from 1932 until 1938. He is now retired. She was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1931 in Chicago which nominated President Roosevelt.

After coming to Washington the family first lived in Silver Spring.

Besides her husband, she is survived by five daughters: Mrs. R. A. Donaldson of Meadville; Mrs. Peter McEvoy of 233 B Street Northeast, Washington; Mrs. Robert Remus of San Francisco; Miss Fannie Crosby of Arlington and Miss Jean Crosby of Bethesda, and four sons, Theodore F., of Miami Beach, Fla.; Charles N., jr., a civilian employe of the Army Engineer Corps; Ronald, of Arlington, and John Crosby in the Army.

Mrs. Rose Martin Dies; Rites Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Rose Baker Martin, 65, who died Thursday at her home, 712 Dorset Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at her home. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Born in Hopkinton, Mass., Mrs. Martin had lived in Washington for 30 years. She was employed in the Treasury Department, registrar's office, until her retirement in 1928. She was a member of the King's Daughters and the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

She is survived by her husband, N. Irving Martin; a brother, Dr. Chester A. Baker, Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. R. O. Kloeber, Washington, and Mrs. G. O. Smith, Malden, Mass.

Stocks Follow Tradition, Ease On Good News

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—Wall Street followed tradition today and sold stocks, bonds and commodities on the exceptionally good war news. Shares, particularly those in the armament category, fell $1 to $3.

Peace-rated issues were more resistant but they also were moderately lower. Stock dealings were fast in the second hour. The pace slowed later and extreme declines were reduced near the close.

The 12-months' climb of the share list to 3-year peaks also caused lightening of accounts on the theory more of a technical correstion was due. In addition, questions concerning the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences, taxes, coal and rail labor problems and Government cancellations of some arms contracts served to dim the generally bullish picture.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was down .6 of a point at 49.9, its fourth successive retreat. The market showed relative breadth, 943 individual issues being traded against 884 the day before. Of the total, 651 were lower, 127 higher and 165 unchanged. Transfers amounted to 1,626,734 shares compared with 1,028,307 Thursday.

Prominent casualties included American Telephone, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Chicago & Eastern Ill. "A" (which failed to respond to a $1 dividend on this issue against an initial payment of 59 cents in January), Chrysler, Goodrich, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Standard Oil (N. J.), Montgomery Ward, Allied Chemical and United States Gypsum.

Further sliding tendencies displayed by commodities took some of the starch out of inflation thinkers. At Chicago wheat was off ¼ to 1 cent a bushel and hogs down 10 to 20 cents. Cotton futures lost 60 to 90 cents a bale.

Another Pair Of Victory Babies In Post Tomorrow

Appearing tomorrow on the Servicemen's Page of the Sunday Post, another pair of Washington Victory Babies who never have been seen by their fathers in uniform will be introduced.

This week's selections were Carol Rae Jones, who will be a year old tomorrow, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Raymond W. Jones of 2000 Thirty-seventh Street Southeast, and Maura Andree Geens, 2 months old, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Maurice W. Geens of 2708 Lee Boulevard, Arlington, Va. Their servicemen fathers, both on duty in the North African area, will receive wallet-size pictures of their Victory Babies and wives and reproductions of the stories about them from The Post.

Meanwhile, Washington mothers are urged to write The Post about their Victory Babies. Entries in the competition should be addressed: Victory Baby Editor, The Washington Post, City Room, Washington, D. C.

TOJO—We'll Find YOUR Soft Spot Next!

DID you see what we did to your pals in Tunisia? We caught the vaunted Africa Korps in a steel trap. We bottled them up with their backs to the sea. Then we delivered the punch that annihilated them. No mercy shown . . . no quarter given . . . and we're still on the march.

That's just a foretaste of what's going to happen to you, Tojo, and to all your domineering, brutal war machine. You're bloated with your conquests . . . but we'll find your soft spot. Look out! We've got a bigger score to even with you. And the day of retribution is coming closer and closer, and furthermore UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER!

Warworkers

Exposure of the Government's negligence in looking after the health of its employes was just a side light in Representative D'Alesandro's investigation into health conditions in the District. Yet it was a service of the greatest importance. While officials in Washington have been talking loud and long about social security, they have done precious little to safeguard the health of the men and women who carry on the Government's routine work. Private industry, as Representative Randolph brought out at the hearing, is far ahead of the Government in the adoption of modern methods of keeping its employes in good health. The paucity of the Government's health program is shockingly illustrated by Dr. Coulter's reports that tuberculosis victims have been brought to Washington to do war work by the civil service system. These employes had passed a superficial health examination, not including an X-ray of the chest. So their infection was not discovered. And when employes are once in the Federal service many departments and agencies are utterly indifferent to the status of their health.

Private industry has found that it is good business to keep employes well. Good health reduces absenteeism, improves efficiency and morale. Some of the more progressive employers—Henry Kaiser, for example—have built hospitals and sponsored plans providing complete medical care for employes at reasonable charges. Most large employers now maintain clinics in which employes can obtain emergency treatment and medical advice. The Treasury Department inaugurated such a plan many years ago and since the war broke out the War Department, OPA and various other agencies have fallen into line. But a great many other Federal agencies are still in the dark ages so far as making efficient use of medical service and advice is concerned. War has made intensive use of doctors more urgent than ever before and has sharpened the necessity of checking illness at its inception. If the Government is to meet its responsibility in this respect, it must greatly expand its system of emergency rooms or health clinics instead of carelessly bringing tuberculosis victims into this already over-burdened city.

Labor In The WPB

The basic defect in our war production program stems from the Government's failure to enroll labor leaders as full partners in the management of the War Production Board. A program of such magnitude as that undertaken in the United States can be executed only as a cooperative enterprise. Capital and labor must support it equally. It is a rather curious paradox that an Administration commonly called prolabor by its critics should have given virtually no official representation to organized workers in the determination of its production policies. Not since the departure of Sidney Hillman has a labor leader of really first-rate stature shared in the planning of our industrial mobilization.

It is heartening, however, even at this late date, that the WPB is said to be considering the appointment of two new vice chairmen, one each from the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. Some of the country's labor leaders have shown a great aptitude for getting at the nub of production problems and finding practical solutions for them. Walter Reuther, it will be remembered, inaugurated and fostered the plan for conversion of the automobile industry and mass production of airplanes.

Labor representation in the top conferences of WPB should go far toward giving the country's industrial workers a sense of assurance that their interests are not being ignored or slighted in the allocation of manpower and supplies and in the difficult details of scheduling. Undoubtedly it will serve as well to give them a fuller appreciation of the special problems which management must meet and overcome. At lower levels, in individual plants, labor-management committees have functioned with a high degree of success.

It is essential, however, that labor leaders who come into high places in the Government should divorce themselves, as leaders of business and industry have done, from the special interests with which they were affiliated. They must become representatives of the Government. The stumbling block to their recruitment in the past has been, at least in part, their own unwillingness to drop completely their union connections. Donald Nelson is entirely correct in insisting that this be done. The Government wants them as men who possess the confidence of labor, not as special pleaders.

Worth A Celebration

A matter calling for attention is the strange absence in this country of enthusiasm, spontaneous or organized, over the triumph of Allied arms in Africa. Here was a real turning point in the war. With Africa cleared of the Axis, and the southern shore of the Mediterranean in our hands, that great artery will now become the route to the final assault and subjugation of both Hitler and the Japanese. The victory, moreover, was striking even breathtaking. In one short and spectacular campaign as many prisoners have been taken as would have constituted the American peacetime Army; the pride of the Nazi army, the Afrika-Korps, has been routed and destroyed; an enormous quantity of booty has been captured. Isn't this all something to rejoice over?

We think so. And when Bizerte and Tunis fell, it was suggested here that preparations for an official celebration were in order. But there has been no move of the kind. Telegrams of congratulation, to be sure, have been exchanged, but, beyond these courtesy messages, there has been no acclaim. Why, in the absence of official sponsorship, is there no spontaneous outburst? Perhaps the lack is all of a piece with the general attitude toward the war. The country entered the second conflict within a generation without the exuberance which marked our entry into World War I. The national mood has been sober, except for the spotty effervescence which always accompanies upheavals in the national life. Nowadays war calls up too many grim reminders of the price in casualties and disordered lives to be regarded by the Nation as a whole as a gay adventure.

Moreover, the end of the war in Africa appears to be thought of as only the end of a prologue. What will happen when the fortress of Europe is breached, when war is taken into Japanese home waters? Victory, yes. Of that there is no longer any doubt. Those among us who used to think with Franco that the upshot of this war could only be a stalemate are now pretty well convinced of an ultimate decision. But the thought of the losses of our manhood which must be endured before we reach the epilogue may account for the absence of community excitement. Even the war itself is prologue in a good many minds. There is a peace to be won which escaped the older generation 25 years ago. And even if we are spared the blood in winning it, certainly there will be enough tears and sweat to be shed. The job will be so vast that even the least thoughtful has no illusions that there will ever be a return to "normalcy."

Even so, the resounding success of Allied arms in North Africa deserved some organized celebration. We have been commemorating our defeats in this war in ceremonies aimed at strengthening the national determination to avenge them. The view expressed here when on the first anniversary we indulged in a lather of mascochistic humiliation over Pearl Harbor was that we should forget defeats the chief lesson of which was our own unpreparedness. Conversely we would plead for some celebration of our victories. Maybe the assault on Europe and Japan will not be the long and bloody pull that at present is the official prospect. The might of such nation as Germany and Japan, which have an inferiority complex, is apt to crumble when victory is seen to be impossible. At any rate, that was the case in the last war with Germany. Evidently General Eisenhower predicted such a denouement for the Battle of Tunisia, and he turned out to be right.

Be this as it may, victories are more sustaining than defeats, and celebrations of victories are not without value in encouraging the elan of the civilian population. Surely this is a matter that calls for OWI recognition. And, while we are on that subject, OWI ought to be able to pry out of the armed services a few parades with bands playing, out as well as in season. Parades give the people a chance to display their patriotism. They are a useful link between military and civilian in enabling the people to pay tribute to the men in the armed forces. That should be of concern to the War and Navy Departments. Why the Army, which is so solicitous of soldier morale that it is overdoing the medal industry, should be so neglectful of the job of maintaining the morale of both civilians and the men in the armed forces by giving us some parades is something of a mystery. The opportunity for this kind of rejoicing and commingling appears to have been missed in the fall of North Africa. But another will come, and then, we hope, there will be some organized effort to afford outlets for a cheer or two.

Loose Money

The disappointingly small contribution of individuals to the April war loan drive to which we drew attention on Monday has brought demands for changes in the method of selling bonds. Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board thinks the commercial banks should be excluded from participation in the special bond drives. The pressure, he says, should be put on individuals, and the banks used only as a last line of defense. Undersecretary of Treasury Bell admits that the Treasury is considering a plan for segregating public borrowing from bank borrowing in the next campaign. And Assistant Secretary Sullivan hopes that the next drive will "see us better organized" and will "result in a substantial increase from individual investors."

The need of putting more pressure upon individuals to buy Government bonds is undeniable. Nor is there the slightest doubt that the American people are holding vast amounts of idle cash in the form of currency and bank deposits. The only way to make sure that these funds will not be used to bid up prices of a constantly diminishing supply of civilian goods and services is either to tax them away in large part or else to induce holders to invest them in Givernment securities.

From present indications, Congress is not likely to pass new tax legislation adequate for this purpose. It is still wasting time over the argument as to the basis of collecting income tax. So it becomes highly important to speed up individual bond purchases as an alternative method of recapturing excess income. Differences of opinion exist as to how that should be done. The Treasury has consistently favored reliance upon voluntary purchases, with a minimum amount of pressure put upon individuals to increase sales. That method has failed. And, in our opinion, it is doubtful whether the mere staging of a separate campaign for increasing individual subscriptions would produce much better results—unless the discredited high pressure methods adopted in World War I were revived.

The alternative would be to substitute a system of compulsory saving that would relate contributions to income. However, to be effective, a compulsory saving plan would have to reach down into the lower income brackets where most of the war-created spending power has gravitated. The Department of Commerce estimates that wages and salaries paid out during the first three months of this year were about 12 billion dollars higher than during the same period in 1939. They had, in fact, more than doubled. It is evident from this showing that wage earners are in position to put many more billions in Government bonds than they are investing currently.

Trade Agreements

It has been said that the commonest error of statesmanship is to cling to the carcasses of dead policies. The error seemed to have fastened upon Republican leadership of the House in the course of the debate on the Trade Agreements Act. It appeared that some of the leaders wanted the tariff making power returned to Congress. But if anything is dead, and deserves to be dead, it is legislation of the tariff. That was demonstrated beyond question by the manner in which, at the behest of local interests everywhere, Congress ran up a Chinese wall in 1930 in the shape of the Hawley-Smoot tariff. To be sure, the tariff power belongs to Congress. But when Congress, in the reaction to Hawley-Smootism, delegated the power to the Executive, that did not involve Executive usurpation. Nor has there been any abandonment by Congress of its authority in respect of the tariff. What Congress did was to lay down a policy for Executive administration of a constitutionally delegated power and to hedge around that administration with precise and careful limitations.

This was done in the reciprocal trade agreements law. On Thursday the House, by a smashing vote of 342 to 65, extended the law for another two years. In so doing the House deserves the heartiest congratulation. At a time when the entire world is looking to this country for leadership in postwar reconstruction, any withdrawal of tariff authority from the President would have created a fear that the United States might not live up to its responsibilities. Economic collaboration is essential to the winning of the peace. And there could be no expression of the national interest in economic collaboration by a return to the old log rolling system. As the Ways and Means Committee majority recommended, renewal was required in the interest of "unity in the war effort, of a secure peace hereafter, and of American prosperity." The House vote is likewise a vote of confidence in the wisdom of Mr. Hull's administration of the act. Nobody could accuse the Secretary of State of arbitrary conduct in this respect. He has been most careful in taking account of all the affected interests, and on more than one occasion, notably in the case of a negotiation with Chile, such interventions have been decisive. The vote is a signal tribute to Mr. Hull. Finally, the House has given the world a demonstration of nonpartisanship on a matter which called for the exclusion of politics. Those Bourbons who still remain squint-eyed in spite of the new circumstances of our world, and those extreme partisans who wished only to register their dislike of the President, are both relinked. We hope the Senate will be as statesmanlike as the House.

WOMAN ORDNANCE WORKER

Brass and death, death and brass,
We sort them out of a shimmering mass—
Plunger, and socket, and closing cap.
Nazi? or Jap? we shall not know
Their destination, just this—they go!

Brass and death, death and brass,
We watch the lustrous sockets pass
In a sinuous stream of pseudo-gold.
Our hands grow cold, and our fingers, numb,
Gripped round the gauges—but still they come!

Brass and death, death and brass,
How fast the finished fuses mass!
They are the ache of back and brain;
They are the pain of eye and head;
They are the tears we might have shed.

Brazil Aids Us

PRESIDENT Getulio Vargas, speaking last Friday at Brazil's Volta Redonda steel plant, gave unstinted credit to the United States for lending part of the money and the technical experience to found this new industry that will mean so much to Brazil's war effort and her postwar development.

The Volta Redonda mills are by no means the only Brazilian development that this country is today aiding with money and technicians. Air and rail communications, mineral, rubber and food output, health conditions, industrial production methods, and Brazil's armed forces are being improved with our help. We are doing this to secure hemisphere stability and help win the war. But what we are doing is only part of the story. There is also a long and unpublicized chapter of the many ways in which Brazil, by far the largest of all the Latin-American countries, is working wholeheartedly at the same job.

Brazil is at war now, but her aid to us goes back long before she came in. It goes back months before Pearl Harbor. In the summer of 1941, when Britain's back was to the wall in Africa, Brazil let us build a great string of air bases down her coast and use them to rush military supplies to the British. These helped the British hold, and the route has since been used heavily in the British-American campaign that has broken Axis power in Africa.

Nazis Fought for Supplies

As far back as early 1941 Brazil began to clamp down on her own citizens for pro-Axis activities, a step we did not take till after Pearl Harbor. The Nazis had been busy there for years, not only because Brazil's bulge was the obvious place for them to start a drive at our soft underbelly, but also because Brazil is one of the greatest treasure-houses of raw materials in the world. The Nazis made extensive preparations to draw on her supplies in the fight against us.

The Vargas government dealt them a heavy blow in May, 1941, when they agreed to sell all surpluses of 11 strategic materials to us. These included quartz crystal, found nowhere else, industrial diamonds and mica, three of the scarcest of all war materials.

The Axis fought back. They had long contracts for these supplies, owned stores of quartz crystal, mica and rubber and controlled all Brazil's cobalt, tungsten and nickel mines. This made it possible to keep shipments moving. In November, 1941, Brazil abruptly blocked their cobalt, tungsten and nickel exports and stopped the Japanese from sending out innocent-looking-little images made of quartz crystal. In December, the government ordered all contracts with the Axis canceled.

Neutrals, Spanish and others, began buying large supplies. Brazil quickly stopped their exports. Then the Axis concentrated on working through Brazilian fronts. The United States blacklist ferreted out most of these and cut them off from United States sources, but of course, we could not touch their operations within Brazil. Brazil's Central Bank, which controls all export and import licensing, broke up their game by stopping both their credit and their export permits.

Axis Nationals Seized

When the Axis finally attacked us outright, Brazil seized all the strategic materials held by Axis nationals, turned them over to us and put many Axis nationals in jail.

Brazil has leased us 13 of her ships and pegged 23 more to Brazilian-United States routes. Instead of using their raw materials as a lever to get preferential treatment of gasoline supplies, they have cut down civilian consumption by 60 per cent. Their railroads give priorities to war ores for us. They have limited crude rubber consumption and stopped the manufacture of nonessential rubber goods. They are earmarking scrap rubber and scrap iron for us. All supplies and machinery used in developing war materials for us are permitted to enter the country duty free. Labor contracts have been canceled and patents, funds and factories have been seized where Axis interests have been found trying to sabotage production of materials we need.

Brazil's resources are tremendous and development has just begun. With the heavy slugging of a long war about to start, full cooperation from this Latin-American nation that Hitler boasted he would take by telephone is making it our raw materials ace in the hole.

Mail By Plane

Having noticed the announcement of the first mail plane anniversary and having attended the original "take-off" ceremonies, I've been wondering how many of those who were there 25 years ago will be there for the celebration next Sunday.

I thought the crowd 25 years ago a very small one, considering the importance of the event. I hope I may hear of others who belonged to that small crowd years ago.

ADELINE STEPHENSON.

Strategy And Tactics

By Barnet Nover

Plotting The Next Steps

THE BASIC STRATEGY which the Allies have pursued since Pearl Harbor has been to concentrate the bulk of their forces against the strongest, i. e., the European, end of the Axis. Since by any calculation she is less strong than Germany, Japan has been left to the last.

Tactically, however, Allied policy has been to engage the enemy, be it Germany or Japan, at the point of greatest weakness. Thus, last fall, when Great Britain and the United States became sufficiently powerful to carry out offensive operations against Hitler, they invaded North Africa rather than open a second land front in Europe.

IN THE PACIFIC our offensive power, never very great, has been directed during the past year at the peripheral zones of Japanese control, at such points as the Tulagi area, New Guinea and now the western Aleutians, as well as the over-extended Japanese supply lines.

The wisdom of this policy has by now been abundantly demonstrated. For an entire year we have done a little better than to hold Japan at bay. And together with the Russians, whose contribution has of course been of surpassing importance, Great Britain and the United States have managed to weaken the Axis considerably. Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander was not exaggerating when he described the Allied victory in Tunisia as "one of the most complete and decisive in history."

THREE GREAT LAND masses separate the Atlantic from the Pacific. They are America, Africa and Europe-Asia.

The Allies are now in complete control of the last two and sufficiently in control of part of the third to keep Japan and Germany effectively apart. More than ever Hitler and Tojo are now forced to wage their respective wars in isolation.

On the other hand, the conquest of Africa and the coming Allied domination of the Mediterranean will make it more than ever possible for the United Nations to carry out a truly global strategy.

Japan's isolation from Germany finds a disturbing parallel, however, in China's isolation from her allies. The breaking down of that isolation so as to permit a free flow of supplies from Great Britain and the United States to China is a peremptory need. The presence in Washington of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell and his air and naval chiefs suggests this circumstance is being thoroughly considered by the Allies.

THIS DOES NOT mean that there will be any basic alteration in Allied strategy during the coming months. It does mean that within the framework of the beat-Hitler-first policy more will be done from now on to strengthen the front against Japan than was done or could have been done hitherto.

Indeed, the heavy blows dealt Hitler during recent months mean a hastening of the day when the total of Allied power will be available for action against our enemy in the Pacific. In the meantime, we shall undoubtedly see a stepping up of the attacks against the Axis at all points where it is weak and vulnerable.

GERMANY'S strength is still very great and it is important not to minimize it. That strength lies in:

1. A military force of still formidable dimensions, supplied by a large, docile and highly skilled population whose morale, weakened by recent defeats, is still far from broken.

2. The possession of interior lines enabling the Wehrmacht to move its forces from one part of the continent to the other with relative rapidity. An Allied attack at any one point on the continent can thus be opposed by a larger force moved from various points in German-held territory.

3. A growing submarine force which has demonstrated its capacity to deal punishing blows to Allied shipping.

BUT GERMANY is also vulnerable, and her vulnerability is increasing rather than diminishing. Her weak points are:

1. A brittle industrial system which cannot be quickly adjusted to the changing war needs of the Axis.

2. The proximity of much of German industry to Allied bombing bases, with the result that the curve of German production is now going down.

3. An overburdened transportation system, the load on which is increasing as a result of Allied bombing of repair yards, locomotive plants, locomotives, canal locks and plants producing synthetic gasoline.

4. The presence in the so-called Fortress of Europe of millions of people who hate the Nazis and are prepared to rise in revolt at a signal from the Allies.

5. The presence along peripheral points of Axis Europe of war-weary allies, such as Italy, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary and Finland. If any one of these is knocked out of the war, and that would be particularly true of Italy, the effect on Germany might well prove catastrophic.

It may be that the Allies are now or will soon be strong enough to assault Hitler's fortress directly, thus aiming at the very heart of Axis strength. Until that moment comes, we can certainly expect a constant pounding away at German weaknesses.

The struggle for Africa has ended. The Battle of Europe has begun.

Rides For Soldiers

To the American serviceman overseas the name of the city of Washington is—right or wrong—symbolic of the American war effort. Our war communiques are datelined Washington; our pronouncements originate here. When a serviceman returns to Washington, however, he must prepare himself for some rude shocks; perhaps the shocks aren't important, any more important than this letter, but those shocks, nevertheless, are hard to take.

I refer to the fact that a serviceman standing on a street corner in the City of Washington waiting for a bus or a streetcar can be certain of only one thing: no Washingtonian is going to offer him a ride.

In San Francisco and New York, both of which I have visited since returning from combat duties in the South Pacific, a serviceman may expect and more than often will be picked up. And it is usually said that these are cities where people are supposed to be heartless and too busy to be courteous.

Washington's lack of interest and courtesy is slightly amusing; evidently nothing can touch the heart of a Washingtonian. As an example I'd like to mention that during the recent cold snap I stood on the corner of one of the main outlying streets of the city and was passed up in a 20-minute period by 37 cars empty except for the driver. I'd like to add that I was wearing a tropical uniform (my others had been lost through enemy action), that it was raining, and that I had no raincoat. I stand on that same corner every day; I have had no rides to date, in some 18 days of standing there. The cars that have passed me empty except for driver probably would run in the hundreds.

These remarks of mine are echoed by nearly all the servicemen I've discussed the matter with.

It might not be improper to add a paragraph to the effect that I would not be surprised to learn that most of the persons standing on street corners waiting for transportation would welcome a ride. Even civilians, surprising as it may sound to a person who still drives about conveniently, dislike the crowded, jerky, standupish buses and streetcars.

Rumors

Please let me salute Major Kelly for the manly, straightforward way in which he handled the situation yesterday arising out of a scheduled demonstration against racial discrimination in our local public utilities.

The able Superintendent of Police had doubtless heard the silly rumors running around town of impending "race riots," should such a demonstration take place, so he took the most practical and direct way of warding off any possible hoodlumism by himself heading the parade and attending the meeting in Franklin Square, thus assuring respectful treatment for the marchers and placard bearers, who were entirely within their civil and legal rights.

Most racial antagonisms have their origins in economic rivalries or conflicts of interests. Today, when jobs are crying for men, instead of men begging for jobs, so that there is work enough and more to go around, there is no legitimate excuse to keep up the barriers against employing colored operators on streetcars and buses.

Colored men are regarded as good enough to give their lives and limbs in defense of this country, the only one they have; they are taxed on parity with the rest of us to bear the burden of the war effort. To deny them equality of opportunity to earn their living here is an intolerable injustice.

Women's Courage

The publication of the Agnes Paston letter in yesterday's Post brings to mind the story of the French wife of a Polish officer in the seventeenth century. As the officer and his two half-grown sons one day mounted their horses preparatory to riding away to battle, his wife came out to the roadside to bid them goodby. She carried her last-born in her arms. In the act of raising the baby to the saddle to receive the father's final caress, she began to cry.

"Woman, why do you weep?" asked the officer, sternly.

"I weep, my lord," came the reply, "because this one is not old enough to go with you." C. L. L.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Pvt. Purkey in Bizerte

Dear Harriet,

Well, me and a lot of other decadent Americans don't look so bad now, I guess. If we are decadent and soft like Hitler always said what does that make the Heinies over here? You should of seen them surrendering in bunches. If they don't look decadent when the jig is up then I am an Arab's horse. We took plenty of Nazi generals prisoner and you have not seen nothing hard to describe until you seen one of them big boys being took.

The way they struggle to keep up the Master Race stuff and at the same time not kill the idea that they wood appreciate a chance to stay in one spot a few minutes and get a full plate of beans with some white bread is a sight for sore eyes. You never really take the swagger out of a German general but just now we are taking some of the generals out of the swagger.

I can't give you many figures about the Italians surrendering on account of they come over to our side at such high speed that it is impossible to count them through the dust. And it ain't no lack of guts. Them Italians just know what double crossers the Nazis are and they wood surrender to anybody that wood help slam Hitler back into the paste buckets. If Mussolini could get over here he wood surrender also. All that keeps him from doing it is transportation and a constant watch.

Well, Harriet, when a Master Race starts taking it on the run it can make Count Fleet seem like a turtle with arthritis. From what has took place here the last few days I wood think every Nazi had a streak of Rommel in him. The Master Race went through Tunis and Bizerte like all it wanted to win was a Preakness and Derby instead of a world war and a new order.

Me and the boys did okay once we got the lay of this goofey country and got seasoned up, but we hand it to the air force for plenty of assists. Talk about an air umbrella! Everything them Heinies did in Poland, Holland, France and Greece they got back with interest. They was never no master race anyhow. They just had the master equipment at the start, that's all. I guess it must do a awful thing to German morale to see all the decadent nations up there in airplanes putting on a decadent blitz like that for the soft Democracies.

Well, I suppose what you want to know is if we will try to invade Europe and if so just where. No general will talk to me about this no matter how I bring the matter up, but I got the dope just the same. Me and the boys will smack it from so many points that Hitler will think he is a waltzing mouse in a can of exploding firecrackers. Adolf will lose this war through a dizzy spell.

If there is one thing Yanks is good at it is the old rough-house act with plenty of speed, punch and brains to out-think a bully who has got courage, wallop and equipment but who is slow on his feet. What do you think we got armies all over Ireland, England, Africa and Egypt for? It is not for no March of Time picture. They are all set to go and they will hit Hitler from so many sides that every swastika in Europe will look like a pinwheel to him.

We will beat 'em like Churchill said to death, dust and ash trays. Don't worry. We got confidence now and we know what makes Heinies run.

All my love,
OSCAR.

P.S. I suppose you wonder why I ain't mentioned as getting no citations. Do not worry. I got plenty. But the things I did take the old man so long to describe that the recommendations is slower than getting into type than most cases.

* * * *

All-out-Arlene, loveliest of WAACS, has another proposal for proper punishment for Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo after the war. She would put them all on an island and make them spend the rest of their lives TOGETHER.

That uniform that Adolf was never going to take off until he won the war is now reported in such shape that the cooties are leaving it of their own accord.

The stock market continues to baffle us. It was going strong up to the minute Bizerte and Tunis fell, giving the alarming promise that everything was going to turn out all right, just as it was before the war.

White House Guards

May I suggest a simple thing which would serve to give us Washingtonian's a much needed lift, and do much to improve our concerted war effort and to improve civilian morale?

Inject some ceremony into the routine changing of the guards, at the White House and other public buildings and places where the military or naval personnel is on guard duty. Troop the colors—have a band and plenty of martial music, flags and organizational and service banners displayed, put some zest and military precision into the whole proceedings. Surely there are enough soldier and sailor musicians on duty in Washington to provide martial music for these occasions, and there should be no shortage of flags and banners to display. After all, we are in this war up to the very hilt, and let's be proud to carry on, and let us have some of the glory, too.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

At The Gates Of Italy

A SOUND judgment on coming events is impossible in so far as we hold to the popular notion that because Italy is not one of the great military powers, Italy is a negligible factor in the World War. As a matter of fact Italy has played and still plays a critical role in the war against Japan as well as in the war against Germany.

LIPPMANN

THE intervention of Italy coincided with the treachery of Marshal Petain, Laval, and Admiral Darlan in taking the French navy out of the war. This compelled the British to concentrate a fleet in the Mediterranean, and strained their naval power to such a degree that they have never had the ships which were necessary to attack Japan, or even to oppose her. We must never forget, because it is essential to an understanding of the future, that the capitulation of Petain, the intervention of Mussolini, and the Japanese seizure of Indo-China, all took place in June 1940 and were part of one grand strategical plan.

The campaigns of Rommel were based on Italy, and would have been entirely impossible without the support of the Italian navy, army, and air force. Though the Italian army suffered inglorious reverses in the campaign against Greece, there is no doubt that without Italy the German conquest of Greece, Yugoslavia, and of Crete, and the occupation of the Balkans, would have required forces that Hitler has used elsewhere. Nor is there much doubt that Italian fascism has exercised great influence upon the menacing attitude of Spain, by convincing the Spanish fascists that if all fascists do not hang together, they will hang separately.

THUS, the victory in Africa will not have been completed until Italy has been eliminated from the war. By pinning down our forces, and by holding against us the three peninsulas of the Mediterranean Sea, Mussolini is defending the outposts and the approaches to his German and Japanese allies. Italy stands in the way of the full use of our air power against Germany: Italy, though a second-class naval power, still neutralizes enough of allied sea power to deprive us of the naval superiority which is necessary for offensive warfare against Japan.

Only when Mussolini's position is destroyed can the deciding phase of the global war begin. This is evident without speculating upon how this is going to be done: whether by frontal assault, by encirclement, or by some other means to end Italian participation in the later chapters of the war.

NOW THAT Rommel's African army has been captured, it is probable that the defense of Italy is largely in the hands of Italians. They are supported by a German air force, and by some troops here and there. But contrary to the general impression, there is reason to think that Italy is not occupied by a substantial German army.

If this information is correct, then it is of the utmost importance that we cease to think of the Italians as mere pawns under Hitler's control, that we cease to make fun of them, cease to asperse their courage and their fighting capacity, and that we address ourselves seriously to the problems of ending the Italian war quickly and at the least cost.

THESE problems are not in the narrow and literal sense only military. And even at the military level, it is clear that they call not only for strategists, tacticians, and the planning of supply, but also for what we may call military statesmanship.

The clue to what this means was given in Tunisia when the Italian commander in chief asked that he be allowed to surrender to the Eighth Army—that is to say to the famous army which has conquered the Italian empire. Marshal Messe's feelings on this point of honor are entitled to respect, and they are highly instructive. They teach us that in dealing with the Italian army, we are dealing with men who will bow to defeat if they are able to feel that they have done their duty as soldiers and that their soldiers' honor is intact. We shall do well to remember this when we come finally to grips with the Italians.

IT IS clear enough also, it would seem, that after the defeat in honorable battle, the task of dealing with the Italian nation will be simpler if we make it clear that the consequence of unconditional surrender is that Italy will be placed under an Allied and purely military government. Italy is an enemy country and, therefore, nothing that was done in French North Africa is a model or a precedent. The Italians will respect more readily, and will be governed more easily by, the general who has defeated them in battle.

We should only confuse them, impair our standing in the world, and entangle ourselves in endless unnecessary trouble, if we made a deal with anybody and then became the protectors and sponsors of an Italian puppet government. The Italians whom we dealt with, however worthy in themselves, would be irreparably injured in the eyes of the Italian nation. Hitler's experience everywhere, and some of our own experience as well, shows conclusively that puppet governments are a liability, and that a stern, efficient and just military rule is far more effective.

BEFORE the conclusion of the Italian war, it will be necessary to reach a final decision on our commitment in regard to the punishment of war criminals. There are some Italian war criminals, though probably not many, and we must not be caught without a clear policy for dealing with them.

It will also be necessary to have a clearly defined policy for dealing with the officials of the Fascist Party—that is to say with those who are not dealt with by their compatriots in the interval, however brief, between the Italian military collapse and the Allied occupation. Here it would seem that the best policy will be to say that while the Italian army may surrender unconditionally but with the honors of war, the officials of the Fascist Party must be handed over, some to be jailed, some to be interned, all to await the judgment of a resurrected and liberated Italy.

WHILE the surrender of Italy will have to be as unconditional as that of Germany or Japan, it does not follow that Italy should or will be treated in the same way. Italy owes reparation to Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, France, and to the people of Spain, and some reparation, chiefly moral, she must make in order to liquidate the memory of the Fascist crimes.

But though some small rectifications of her frontiers are called for in the interest of justice to Austria and to the Yugoslavs, there will be no thought of dismembering Italy. Italy will not lose her independence, and, once she returns to a regime of constitutional freedom, there will be no disposition to exclude her from her historic place among the nations. No one thinks of Italy as a lasting menace to the peace of the world. Nor must it be assumed that Italy has necessarily lost forever all her colonies in Africa. She may yet have a smaller but a better future in Africa than Mussolini has been able to provide her with.

THUS, FOR the Italian nation, for the Italian army, navy and air force, but not for Mussolini and the Fascist officials, defeat, which is inexorably certain, can bring honor, peace, order, a decent future, and a return to the company of civilized men.

British Home Guard Hailed by Churchill in Broadcast From White House

Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast on the third anniversary of the British Home Guard:

I have felt for some time a great desire that a tribute should be paid throughout Great Britain and in Ulster to the faithful, unwearying and absolutely indispensable work done by the Home Guard month after month and year after year. Accordingly, next Sunday military parades and religious services will be held throughout the land to associate the nation and the Home Guard in the celebration of its first three years of life.

As we move through these tremendous times, with their swift succession of formidable or glittering events, we must not overlook or consider as matters of mere routine those unceasing daily and nightly efforts of millions of men and women which constitute the foundation of our capacity to wage this righteous war, wherever it may carry us, all over the world.

Britain Under Siege

All British war energies depend upon the unfailing defense and adequate nourishment of our small island home, which lies only 21 miles from the German batteries and only a few minutes' flight from their airfields.

Great Britain is the advanced fighting base of the United Nations and is still under constant siege and assault by air and sea. It is in a very large measure the powerhouse and directing center of the whole of a vast output of war equipment. It is the home and cradle of the navy. From its ports sail the convoys which carry forth the expeditionary armies and to them come the food and supplies by which our tense, organized, vibrant life is sustained. In this home there burns the light of freedom. Guard it well, Home Guard.

Our eyes are fixed upon the future, but we may spare a moment to glance back to those past days of 1940 which are so strangely imprinted on our memories that we can hardly tell whether they are near or far away.

In those days of May and June and July, in that terrible summer when we stood alone, and as the world thought forlorn, against the all-powerful aggressor with his vast armies and masses of equipment, Anthony Eden as Secretary of State for War called upon the local defense volunteers to rally round the searchlight positions. Shotguns, sporting rifles, clubs and staves were all they could find for weapons.

Million Rifles From U. S.

It was not until July that we ferried safely across the Atlantic the million rifles and one thousand field guns, with ammunition proportionable, which were given to us by the Government and people of the United States by an act of precious and timely succor. You will remember how we had the special trains waiting to carry the rifles to all the Home Guard areas and how you worked night and day to clean them from the grease in which they had been stored for a generation.

You will remember how we hardly dared to fire a round for practice, so dire was the stringency. But this was the great turning point in your story, and I asked that your name should be changed and that you should assume the proud title of "Home Guard." Thenceforward at any rate you had military weapons in your hands. Thenceforward when imagining the horrors of a Hun invasion, there rose that last consoling thought of unenslavable men: "You can always take one wit' you."

Very different is our condition today. We are an armed people. The strength of the Home Guard has risen steadily; clothing and equipment are complete. Instead of the shotguns and homemade bombs, most now have rifles or Stenguns, or machine guns, or serve in the antitank or antiaircraft teams. Ammunition, long so scarce, is now sufficient to allow each man to practice with his own weapons. We have just authorized a substantial increase for firing practice.

Since 1940 many of the Home Guard have joined the regular forces; some older men have retired, having done their duty in the hour of need. Younger men owe to them the experience and leadership they have inherited. Nearly a year ago compulsory enrollment was introduced and the "directed" men, as they are called, have proved as good and as willing as the original volunteers.

With them came the lads of 17, many already trained in the Army Cadet Forces. New units have been formed for special duties; many hundreds of ack-ack guns are manned by the Home Guard. Scores of batteries have been in action and have acquitted themselves worthily. Women have played an ever larger part at the guns. The coast defense and motor transport units which have been formed will grow in efficiency throughout the year.

All Who Helped Thanked

Credit is due not only to the Home Guardsmen themselves, but to all who have helped them; to the employers and managements who make it easy to fit in Home Guard duty with men's employment; to the wives and mothers who have made Home Guard service easier in so many ways, and to the voluntary women helpers to whom we have now given in official recognition a badge of service.

We have now nearly two million resolute trained and equipped men, all of whom do their daily work in field or factory and add to it free, gratis and for nothing but honor, the last and proudest duty of a citizen of the empire and a soldier of the King.

People who note and mark our growing mastery of the air, not only over our island, but penetrating into ever-widening zones on the continent, ask whether the danger of invasion has not passed away. Let me assure you of this, that until Hitler and Hitlerism are beaten into unconditional surrender the danger of invasion will never pass away.

The degree of the invasion danger depends entirely upon the strength or weakness of the forces and preparations gathered to meet it. The larger the army that must be brought across the seas to attack and subjugate us, the greater the difficulties of the operation and the better the targets which would be open to the Royal Navy and to the British and American Air Forces on the spot.

Vital Part of Defense

You, Home Guardsmen, are a vital part of those forces. You are specially adapted to meet that most modern form of oversea attack—the mass descent of parachute troops. The Home Guard might well share the motto of the Royal Artillery "ubique," for they are everywhere, and if the Nazi villains drop down upon us from the skies any night, in raid or heavy attack upon key production centers, you will make it clear to them that they have not alighted in the poultry-run, or the rabbit farm, or even in the sheep-fold, but that they have come down in the lion's den at the zoo.

Here is the reality of your work. Here is that sense of imminent emergency which cheers and inspires the long routine of drills and musters after the hard day's work is done.

But I have more to say to you than this. I am speaking to you now from the White House in Washington, where I am staying, with my honored friend, the President of the United States. These are great days. They are like the days in Lord Chatham's time, of which it was said you had to get up very early in the morning not to miss some news of victory. Ah! But victory is no conclusion. Even final victory will only open a new and happier field of valiant endeavor. The victories gained by the way must be a spur.

We are gathered here now with the highest professional authorities in all the fighting services of the two great English-speaking nations, to plan well ahead of the armies who are moving swiftly forward.

It is no good only having one march ahead laid out. March after march must be planned as far as human eye can see. Design and forethought must be our guides and heralds. We owe it to the fighting troops. We owe it to the vast communities we are leading out of the dark places; we owe it to heroic Russia, to long-tormented China; we owe it to the captive and enslaved nations who beckon us on through their prison bars.

At present we have strong armies in Great Britain, and it is the assembly base for the United States armies of liberation coming across the broad Atlantic. But this is not the end. We must prepare for the time which is approaching and will surely come, when the bulk of these armies will have advanced across the sea into deadly grapple on the continent.

Just in the same way as the Home Guard render the regular forces mobile against an invader, so the Home Guard must become capable of taking a great deal of the burden of home defense on themselves and thus setting free the bulk of our trained troops for the assault of the strongholds of the enemy's power.

It is this reason which above all others has prompted me to make you and all Britain realize afresh by this Home Guard celebration and demonstration the magnitude and lively importance of your duties and of the part you have to play in the supreme cause now gathering momentum as it rolls forward to its goal.

Sled Party Marooned for Weeks in Snow Hut on Greenland Ice

Copyright, 1943, U. S. Army Air Forces Aid Society.

(Sixth of Series.)

The motor sled, with Tetley, Spencer and O'Hara, broke down on December 7. For the next two days the weather was impossible, with the eternal high winds and driving snow of Greenland: then on the tenth it turned fair and Pappy Turner's B-17 flew over them, dropping plentiful supplies. It was able to supply them again seven days later, so for a time they were all right from that point of view.

At this camp there was on the whole less wind than there was at the B-17, but the drifting snow was much more serious. One stormy night the snow piled up so against O'Hara's side of the tent as to threaten to crush him.

Spencer and Tetley spent a miserable night (as did the sick man), getting up by turns to shovel the snow away, for it kept piling up fast. The next day they dug a fair-sized snow hole in the ground in the lee of the tent, with a tunnel entrance, and the two officers moved into that.

Spencer used to take the shovel to bed with him. In the night the snow would drift over his hole so deeply that he would have to dig himself out in the morning, then he would go and dig out Tetley.

During this period occurred one of several times when their food ran low and they had to cut their rations, which meant, of course, that the weather was miserable.

Bad Start for Day

One morning Spencer dug himself out and struggled over to Tetley's burrow, where he called down to know if the sergeant wanted to come out. They could just about hear each other when they shouted. Tetley asked about the weather and when he learned what it was like decided that he'd sooner stay where he was than come out into it to eat.

He remained holed up that day and the next morning, which was clear, he was famished. They had just two K rations left and decided to make a last feed of it. They were cooking in the tent at this time, trying to use the stove which had been dropped to them, which was not in very good shape, both for cooking and for warmth.

In huddling over it, Tetley knocked it over and spilled the last rations into a mixture of snow and gasoline. They salvaged and ate what they could. Then they put the coffee on and in trying to scrape up more food, spilled that.

It was a bad start to the day, they thought. In the evening (that is, as evenings are reckoned by the clock, the days by now were actually only two hours long) Captain Turner's B-17 came over and dropped them more supplies. They gathered them in with delight and sat up all night, eating.

Eating Difficulties

Improvement of their quarters progressed slowly, because in that cold everything is hard to do. It took about three hours to melt water and thaw out the canned foods for a meal, as everything was frozen solid. The stove constantly required repair.

Until the snow buried it hopelessly, they put in a good deal of time trying to get the sled into operation. Tetley, who was also the cook, rigged flare pots out of used tin cans, in which they burned kerosene. They usually got up in the dark around 7 o'clock, cooked breakfast and went to work, then cooked dinner at 5. They would sleep till midnight, and then have a snack of coffee.

At first the diggable snow above the solid ice was so shallow that they could dig rooms only three feet high, in which they could barely crawl around. This was bad enough for the two who were ablebodied, but far worse for the sick man, who was now very weak. They nursed him as well as they could, and they were deeply impressed by the way his morale stayed up and he did not complain.

As the snow fell, they dug the ceilings of their first room higher, then added another room to the officers' house which was a full six feet high, so that a man could stand up to dress, Tetley ran a passage into this from his room, bringing them all together.

Skis Make Roof

They placed blocks of ice around the entrance to the enlarged quarters, and as the snow level rose, laid skis across to support a roof, giving them a better kitchen. The snow continued to fall and drift plentifully, so they made another entrance around which they arranged skis tepee fashion.

This in turn became a room, in which they kept their food, shovel, and other supplies. It was a month or more before all this was done, giving them a three-story house. By then, of course, the sled was hopelessly buried.

The progress they made in establishing some comfort for themselves is evidence of Monteverde's wisdom in choosing Spencer (and originally Wedel) to accompany the sled. Tetley had acquired a lot of knowledge for his short time in the Arctic, and in Spencer he had a companion who kept as well and was as enterprising as he.

The two Texans adapted themselves to the everlasting snow like natives, far cry as it was from Dallas, or from Tetley's string of horses in the pasture back home.

Sparse Christmas Day

Towards the end of the month their supplies ran low again. On Christmas Day they knew that for safety they ought to cut their rations sharply, but they put that off until the 26th.

They feasted as best they could on exactly the same food they always ate, and had a try at singing carols. They were not musical. None of them was qualified as a singer, but they did their best, and had the feeling that at least they had not ignored Christmas.

That such long intervals occurred when nothing was dropped to them does not mean any laxitiy on the part of the men of the maintenance B-17. On the contrary, Pappy Turner and his crew were so faithful in turning up whenever it was humanly possible, that the boys at the sled camp and those at the B-17 had the greatest faith in him. They looked on him as their adequate life-line.

On December 27 he flew over, but the weather was so bad and the driving snow at ground level so furious that it was not possible to drop anything. He came back on the 28th, and once again they had plenty.

With the advancing winter and worsening weather it was out of the question for any sled to repeat the trip Tetley and DeMorest had made, nor did there seem any possibility of a plane's landing, but they were beginning to have some measure of comfort, and for a time again they need not fear starvation.

Oregonian Gets Cowles' OWI Post

Gardner Cowles, jr., Des Moines publisher, has resigned as domestic director of the Office of War Information, it was announced yesterday. Director Elmer Davis said Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Morning Oregonian at Portland, will succed him.

Hoyt will take over about June 20.

"We hate to lose Gardner Cowles from OWI," Davis said, "but he has served a year and feels he must resign to give attention to his several publications. I feel OWI is fortunate to have Mr. Hoyt as his successor.

"Mr. Hoyt is a competent, experienced newspaperman who enjoys the respect of newspapermen throughout the country. He knows particularly well the problems and point of view of the West, which should be helpful to all of us here in Washington."

Hoyt became publisher of the Oregonian in 1938. He served with the army in France in the first World War. OWI's announcement noted that he is a Republican, as is Cowles.

Cowles said he planned to return to Des Moines, Iowa. He is president of the Register and Tribune, president of Look magazine, vice president of the Minneapolis Star-Journal, and president of the Iowa Broadcasting Co.

It is understood Cowles will associate himself with Wendell Willkie if and when Willkie announces he will be a candidate for the presidential nomination.

AFL Flays Offer to Drop Kaiser Case in Swap for Closed Shop

The National Labor Relations Board proposed yesterday to dismiss its complaint case against the Kaiser shipyard if the American Federation of Labor will agree to strike the closed shop provision from its contracts. The proposal brought an angry rejection from the federation.

The board's position was read to the House Merchant Marine Subcommittee investigating the jurisdictional dispute in the Kaiser yards by John Houston, a member of the board.

"As has been repeatedly pointed out," Houston's statement said, "the sole issue raised by the board's proceedings in the Kaiser shipbuilding cases is the validity of the closed shop provisions of the contracts now existing between the companies and the American Federation of Labor unions," Houston's statement said.

In Public Interest

"The board makes this public offer before this committee in order that it may be perfectly clear that a disposition of the controversy can be had at once. In the opinion of the board, such a termination of the proceedings would be definitely in the public interest."

Other NLRB spokesmen said, however, that termination of the board's complaint in the Kaiser cases on that basis would not necessarily terminate union rivalry there. Either the A. F. L. unions, the C. I. O. or the employer could immediately petition the board to conduct an election for the designation of an exclusive bargaining agent.

Open Shop's Bellwether

A reply came quickly from John P. Frey president of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. L., who charged in a statement that "a Federal agency created to foster collective bargaining" and "becomes the bellwether of the open shop movement which would bring instability and confusion to a large portion of the country's war production."

Frey said the policy would apply to six other shipyards, cases against which are still before the regional NLRB, and declared that members of the committee expressed the view that it would even apply to the Ford plants.

He said he had told the committee "that the trade unionists did not intend to permit their movement to be destroyed by a governmental agency seeking to take advantage of the exigencies of war. His statement added:

"The utter bewilderment of the board is reflected in the statement before the committee by its general counsel that the closed shop contract holds American workers in slavery. I challenged and I challenge again the right of a man occupying his position on a board created to foster collective bargaining to make this statement and become the advocate of the unorganized shop while holding a responsible Federal office."

The Gallup Poll

Allied Policy of Sparing Rome From Bombs Finds Public Approval in U. S. Survey

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 14.—With Allied air forces brought to within 400 miles of Rome by the conquest of Tunisia, the question arises as to whether there is general public approval of the Allied policy which has avoided the all-out bombing of Rome thus far in the war.

The ancient center of Catholic culture presents a number of legitimate military targets both in the city itself and the suburbs—factories, military camps, shipyards, and the like. Although the Axis has indiscriminately bombed many historic landmarks in England and elsewhere, it is frequently argued that Rome should be entirely spared, even though other Axis capitals have been bombed by the Allies.

The question of bombing Rome is obviously one for military decision rather than popular decision. But the public's viewpoint presents an interesting sidelight on the issue.

Spare Rome, Most Say

A coast-to-coast survey by the Institute among Americans who have followed the discussion of the question or indicate an interest in the problem shows that the weight of opinion is in support of the Allied policy of sparing Rome from mass air attacks.

As might be expected, Catholics interviewed in the survey were overwhelmingly opposed to bombing Rome. Protestants were also found to be opposed, although by a smaller majority. Among nonchurch members opinion was closely divided, with a slight preponderance in favor of bombing the Italian capital.

The survey was conducted on the following issue:

"Do you think the Allied air forces should bomb Rome?"

The general attitude is as follows:

Yes	37%
No	51
No opinion	12

The relative attitude of Catholic, Protestants and nonchurch members interviewed in the study were as follows:

	Yes	No	Undecided
Catholics	24%	67%	9%
Protestants	36	52	12
Nonchurch members	47	40	13

The reactions of the public are typified in the report of what one interviewer for the Institute found in Pittsburgh:

Some Typical Views

"Because Rome is thought of as the 'Holy City,' about half of the people interviewed here objected strongly to its being bombed. Besides pointing out that it is the home of the Pope, they gave various reasons against the bombing—it is not truly a military objective—bombs would be of more use on Berlin—it would be a 'spite' bombing. Others who took the affirmative side said that Rome, being the heart of Italy, should be struck just as hard as any other Axis capital; that such bombing would aid an invasion of Italy and hasten a psychological crack-up of the Mussolini government."

An interviewer in Strasburg, Va., reports: "The attitude of those here who think Rome should be bombed is best expressed in the words of one voter: 'Sure. Look what the Axis did to France and England, and think what they would do to us if they could, and you tell me why Rome should not be bombed'."

Another typical reaction is reported by the interviewer in Sidney, Nebr.: "Let's not be any more barbarous than we have to be, but if that's the only language they understand, give it to them. Anything to win this war and do it quickly."

Committee Calls From Congress Irk Admiral Land

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land told the Senate Small Business Committee yesterday that he "might do a better job" as chairman of the Maritime Commission if he could spend more time at his office and less before congressional hearings.

"This is the third time this week I've had to come up to the Hill," Land said, "and I've got to come up tomorrow before still another committee. I might do a better job getting business to smaller war plants if I had more time to devote to it."

Land testified every effort was being made to channel business to smaller plants, but that "my responsibility is to deliver these ships on time in accordance with Presidential directive."

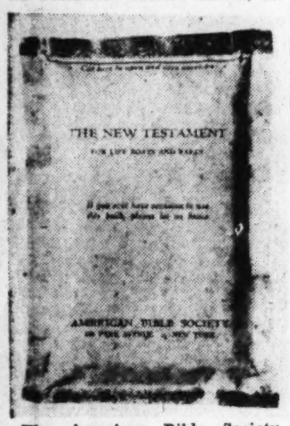
War Keeps Bible Society Working Hard

The American Bible Society, which held its 127th annual meeting Thursday in New York City, reports that in these years it has published and distributed over a third of a billion copies of the Scriptures in over 200 languages and in more than 50 countries.

The society's presses were going constantly during 1942 turning out Testaments for the Army and Navy, similar to those being supplied by the Bible Society for the lifeboats and rafts of the Merchant Marine, at the rate of 11,000 a day, with many requests from chaplains still unfilled.

Bibles in Lifeboats

When the news was flashed to the world that Eddie Rickenbacker and his comrades, lost in the treacherous Pacific for those anxious 21 days, had been rescued and the amazing story of their daily use of Sergeant Bartek's little Testament became known, the



The American Bible Society, with the cooperation of the Maritime Commission, is providing thousands of testaments in waterproof packets for use on lifeboats and rafts of the Merchant Marine

American Bible Society joined in the general thanksgiving and then did something more. It realized that most of such experiences are likely to occur among the Merchant Marine, because of the constand hazards to which they are exposed, so that the society offered its services, which were accepted, and, as a result there is now included in the equipment of every one of the 20,000 lifeboats and rafts, on the hundreds of vessels operated under the War Shipping Administration, a copy of the New Testament, including also the Ten Commandments, some of the great Psalms, some old hymns and some prayers. This little book is inclosed in a stout waterproof envelope made of oiled paper and lined with lead foil and sealed with a hot iron.

The Bible Society manufactured in this country alone last year more than 8,200,000 books—which is the largest number ever manufactured in the United States in the society's long history; and also exceeds the distribution made by the society all over the world last year.

In 20 Languages

The tremendous needs at home did not blind the Bible Society to the even greater needs abroad. Hundreds of thousands of Bibles, Testaments, and Gospel portions were distributed in 20 different languages to prisoners of war languishing in enemy territory.

It was difficult to get shipments through to Latin America during 1942, due to lack of transportation, but the society's report shows that the circulation in our sister republics to the south was one of the greatest in all the years since 1864 when the work began there; and that the agents' shelves were empty, for the most part, long before the year was out, so eager are our Latin neighbors to own and possess the Bible.

New Baptist Church Plans Now Ready

Preliminary drawings of the proposed North Washington-Highlands Baptist Church will be presented tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the North Washington Baptist Church. This Sunday also marks the third anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Henry J. Smith.

The North Washington Baptist Church was organized three years ago the first Sunday in May with a membership of 58. The present membership is 212.

A building fund started in February 1942 is growing steadily and it is expected that the structure can be undertaken as soon as materials are available.

1500 Children To Participate In Ceremony

One of the most impressive religious services held annually in the Capital will take place in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m., when children from church schools of the Diocese of Washington join in the annual presentation of Lenten offerings for the missionary work of the church. Some 1500 church school children are expected to attend this service, which will replace the regular 4 o'clock evensong.

Delegates from church schools throughout the diocese will march in the procession of choir and clergy, carrying their colorful identification banners. Music will be by massed junior choirs of Washington Episcopal churches, consisting of approximately 500 voices. The Rev. C. R. Mengers, chairman of the diocesan department of religious education and rector of St. Columba's Episcopal Church, will address the congregation, and the offering will be received by the Right Rev. George W. Davenport, retired, former Bishop of Easton, in the absence of the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, who will be unable to attend because of illness.

Ages of Chaplains Changed by Army

Revised eligibility requirements now permit acceptance of a limited number of men between the ages of 50 and 55 for officer appointments as chaplains in the Army of the United States, it was announced this week.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Third Service Command, said the War Department had adjusted its age requirements so that qualified clergymen from 24 to 55 now are eligible.

Among the other requirements are an acceptable ecclesiastical indorsement from the clergyman's denomination and active engagement in the ministry as his principal vocation in life prior to appointment as a chaplain.

Candidates in the Third Service Command, which includes Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, should apply to Col. Harry D. Southard, chief of the Service Command Chaplain Branch, United States Postoffice Building, Baltimore.

Anti-Saloon League Meets Tomorrow

The annual national Anti-Saloon League conference will be held here tomorrow and Monday, with prominent churchmen as speakers. The delegates also will be guest speakers in several pulpits.

Bishop Ralph S. Cushman of the St. Paul (Minnesota) Methodist area, league president, and the Rev. Sam Morris of San Antonio, Tex., league field speaker, will address a meeting tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H Streets Northwest.

The prelate will speak at 11 a. m. at Foundry Methodist Church. The Rev. E. C. Prettyman, head of Michigan's Anti-Saloon League, will be heard at 11 a. m. at Brightwood Park Methodist Church, Eighth and Jefferson Streets Northwest.

Dr. John W. Moore of Roanoke, Va., also of the Anti-Saloon League, will preach at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, and at 11 a. m. at Francis Asbury Methodist Church. George W. Crabbe, league secretary, will speak at 11 a. m., at Emory Methodist Church, Brightwood. Dr. Titus Frazee, superintendent of the Southern California district, will preach at 7:30 p. m. at Woodside Methodist Church, Silver Spring, Md.

Appeal to Youth

Young People's Council of S. A. Opens Annual Meeting Today

The annual Young People's Council of the Salvation Army in the National Capital Division will be conducted today and tomorrow by Col. Edmund C. Hoffman, chief secretary of the 15 Southern States.

Colonel Hoffman is widely known throughout the Salvation Army circles as a speaker of note. He will be supported by the field secretary, Col. George H. Marshall, formerly divisional commander in Baltimore; the territorial young people's secretary, Brigadier Richard B. Fitton, and Mrs. Fitton; Maj. James A. Longina, National Capital divisional commander, and Mrs. Longino.

All sessions will be held at the Temple Corps Auditorium, 606 E Street Northwest. The Saturday afternoon session will be restricted to delegates only but the Saturday evening program, commencing at 7:45 p. m. and featuring a musical pageant depicting Salvation Army youth activities under the title of "The Crusade to the Cross," will be opened to the public. This pageant, written and directed by Adjt. William L. Devoto, divisional young people's secretary, and composed of the most talented young people of the division, has been especially produced for the occasion.

Churchmen In Norway File Draft Protest

Religious leaders in Norway have protested vigorously against the mobilization of Norwegian men, many of whom are being conscripted for work on German fortifications, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Norwegian Embassy.

The Embassy has received information concerning the protest, embodied in a letter to Quisling, which declares that the program of labor conscription launched by the Nazis in Norway during the past few weeks is in reality a contribution to the German military effort, that Norwegians work under German command in German uniforms. It points out that this form of service is a violation of The Hague Convention and contrary to the terms of the "total mobilization law."

As long as a state of war exists between Norway and Germany, it adds, any effort made by the Germans to force conscripted Norwegians to take part in military operations or in actions with a military objective to the benefit of the power with whom Norway is at war is a flagrant violation of international law.

The letter continues: "The church cannot remain silent before this conflict of conscience. As Christians we must regard our country as a gift from God entrusted to our people by God. God has called upon the church to be the guardian of society whenever force is applied against souls. We therefore ask the Minister President (Quisling) to desist from conscription of Norwegians to a service which is against both their conscience and sense of justice."

This protest was prepared by the Rev. Ludvig Hope and Prof. O. Hallesby in behalf of the Temporary Church Leadership, a group of churchmen who are leading the Church of Norway now when the rightful bishops are unable to perform their duties.

Though traditionally a state church, the bishops and nearly all of the 100 clergymen of the country resigned as state officials early in 1942 in protest against the encroachments of Naziism.

Calvary Tomorrow

Youth Event Scheduled By Baptists

Age will step aside tomorrow at Calvary Baptist Church, as young people observe "Youth Sunday" by preaching the sermons, ushering, and carrying out other official tasks.

Robert Sammons will preach at 11 a. m., on "Christ Has the Answer," and Ensign John Lawrence, at 8 p. m., on "And What of Tomorrow?" Miss Wanda Rook will have charge of youth usherettes; Louise Parker will teach the deaf department, and Orville Luedtke will be Sunday School superintendent for the day.

Young people will serve as trustees and deacons, Sunday School teachers and in other activities. The "Youth Week" banquet was held last night, when Dr. Seth R. Brooks, chairman of the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital and pastor of Universalist National Church, spoke.

Pastor and Wife Given Reception

The congregation of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, led by the church council, Thursday night tendered a reception to the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, the new pastor, and Mrs. Tabor, in the parish hall.

Lawrence Pedersen brought greetings from the church, speaking in place of Arthur P. Black, council president, who was absent, and Alden Towberman was toastmaster. In his message, Mr. Tabor stressed the need of teamwork in making a successful church. Several fellow-clergymen, including Dr. Raymond C. Sorrick, president of the Maryland Synod and pastor of the St. Luke Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, participated.

St. Matthew's To Celebrate Fiftieth Year

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church will be celebrated tomorrow. The festival preacher will be a former pastor, the Rev. E. H. Meuser, director of home missions of the American Lutheran Church, Columbus, Ohio. The Rev. Mr. Meuser was pastor of the congregation from 1925 to 1937 and guided the congregation in the construction of its present church building in 1930.

A congregational reception will be held on Friday evening with the presenting of a historical play and the showing of a historical movie. The oldest members in the congregation will be honored.

Other anniversary services include a festival service on May 23 with Dr. G. E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, the speaker. The anniversary communion service will be held on Memorial Day, with the pastor, the Rev. Theodore P. Fricke preaching the sermon.

"AVE, MARIS STELLA"
Hail, thou star of ocean
Portal of the sky!
Ever Virgin Mother
Of the Lord most high!
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
It is said that Columbus sung this hymn, and caused it to be sung every evening during his perilous voyage to the new world. "Maris Stella" or "Star of the Sea" was a marina epithet applied to the Mother of Jesus by the Roman Catholics in the Middle Ages.

Local Churches Plan to Mark Patriotic Day

Special religious services in local and nearby churches tomorrow will commemorate "I Am an American Day."

Among highlights will be the dedication of a service flag at 10:45 a. m. at the Italian Baptist Church of the Redeemer, 1200 Kirby Street Northwest, one of the few Italian Protestant churches in America. The services will be led by the Rev. M. C. Marseglia, pastor, and the Rev. Olindo Marseglia, his son, assistant pastor.

Legislator Speaks

A prominent Texas legislator, who has requested anonymity, will address "I Am an American Day" services at 8 p. m. at Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest. The Rev. J. Luther Holcomb, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m.

Members of Brightwood Park Masonic Lodge No. 43 will attend services at 11 a. m. at St. Mark's Incarnation Lutheran Church, Fourteenth and Gallatin Streets Northwest, where the Rev. Henry Manken, D. D., will preach.

Dr. Edman to Speak Before Several Meetings Here

Dr. V. Raymond Edman, president of Wheaton (Ill.) College, will address several gatherings here this weekend.

He will appear before the Christian Youth and Servicemen's rally today at 7:45 p. m. at the Almas Temple, where he will show colored films of Wheaton College.

His schedule for tomorrow will include an address at 11 a. m. at National Baptist Memorial Church; before a joint meeting of training unions at Metropolitan Baptist Church at 6:30 p. m., and at the evening service at 7:45 p. m. at Metropolitan Church.

Pastor's Subject Deals With Rumor

The flood of conflicting and detrimental rumors that have been circulating throughout the Nation and the Nation's Capital, damaging civilian morale and promoting lack of harmony amidst our people, has led to the choice of the sermon subject for tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Stephen's Lutheran Church. The Rev. George K. Powers will preach on "Emotional Hot Water!" dealing with the Christian psychology of disciplining renegade thoughts and ideas.

Homes for British Navy Men Sought by Church Federation

"THUMBS UP"—Say these two British sailors, Sydney Barnard, 27 (left), and Fred Conway, 25, leading stokers, who arrived in New York City a few days ago and are staying for several days with Col. and Mrs. Adrian Williamson 2820 North Franklin Road, Arlington, Va. The lodging was arranged through the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission. Fred, with seven years' seaman service behind him, hails from Ramshead, Kent, while "Barney" is a native of Hurley, Berkshire

Do you have a son, brother or sweetheart in the armed forces? Has he ever written to you to express his gratitude for the warm hospitality extended him by English people when he arrived there? Made you feel pretty good, didn't it?

Well, every week numbers of British sailors and marines who have just arrived in America come to Washington for brief furloughs.

Naturally, the lads' funds are limited, and the Defense Commission of the Washington Federation of Churches is trying to get them free lodging, with meals optional. So, if you would like to reciprocate favors extended your boys abroad, clip the notice below and mail to Miss Jane Sniffen, the Federation of Churches, 1751 N Street Northwest. Telephone Decatur 3132.

Group to Mark Canon Law Silver Jubilee

Commemorating the silver jubilee of the Code of Canon Law, promulgated by the late Pope Benedict XV, May 27, 1917, and effective in the Catholic Church since May 19, 1918, the Canon Law Society of America will meet in McMahon Hall auditorium of Catholic University tomorrow at 4 p. m. for the Washington region.

The observance will open with a pontifical high mass of thanksgiving in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with the Most Rev. George L. Leech, Bishop of Harrisburg, ranking alumnus of the School of Canon Law of the university, as celebrant. Priests from Washington and elsewhere will serve as officers of the mass, at which the Very Rev. James H. Griffiths, vice chancellor of the diocese of Brooklyn, will be the preacher.

At the afternoon meeting of the Washington regional members of the society the Very Rev. William J. Doheny, C. S. C., supervisor of the generalate of Holy Cross and first president of the national organization, will read a paper on "The Summary Process of Canon, 1990."

The year's celebration will include a series of lectures on Canon Law for Catholic laymen in the larger centers of the country, as well as addresses on Canon Law in seminars to be held in a selected list of American law schools.

Suburban Steeple

Reconstruction and enlargement of the Rockville Methodist Church, badly damaged by fire last year, is almost completed and will be opened the first Sunday in June, according to the Rev. John Rosenberger, pastor.

However, formal dedication must be deferred until the building is debt free, in accordance with the discipline of the now united Methodist Church. The reconstruction program is said to have cost about $35,000, all of which has been contributed in cash or pledges.

Herndon Church

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Washington Federation of Churches' executive secretary, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Herndon Congregational Church, as one of the features of the church's diamond jubilee celebration now in progress.

Ronald Blake of Fairfax last Sunday was installed as an elder of the Vienna Presbyterian Church at the same service where his son, Ronald Weade Blake, was given a New Testament before entering the service of his country.

The 30 members of St. Mary's Episcopal Church of Arlington, Va., now on active duty in the armed services, will be honored tomorrow at 11 a. m. A church Roll of Honor with each name inscribed thereon will be dedicated at the morning church service and a special collection will be taken for the Army and Navy Commission Fund, which is aiding the Episcopal clergy now serving as chaplains in the armed services.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Mrs. Cushing Wins Post Cup Golf Event

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Any day now, Mr. Peter Reilly will be dropping into town. The comings and goings of one more person with business in Washington is not important, of course, but Mr. Reilly is bringing his own particular brand of madness to madhouse headquarters.

POVICH

The business that brings Pete Reilly here is the Jackie Wilson-Danny Petro featherweight fight at Griffith Stadium on Monday night. Reilly owns a piece of Jackie Wilson. That is not surprising, because Reilly has a habit of attaching himself to the finest fistic properties. In his time he has managed five world champions.

Mr. Reilly is a fun-loving sort, and woe to the unsuspecting. He is the No. 1 perpetrator of hilarious ribs and is generally credited with modernizing the hotfoot, a quaint joke that supposedly originated with the ancient Greeks but lay buried in antiquity until Pete revived it.

Mr. Reilly considers his biggest single hotfoot job the one he pulled against naive Primo Carnera who has his size 18 brogans planted beneath a table in Jack Dempsey's New York restaurant several years ago. On that occasion, Pete managed what he called a double-triple hotfoot, a heat generated by three matches inserted in the instep of each of Da Preem's big shoes.

There was the day, too, when Reilly's fascinating buffonery took the form of an unappreciated prank against this department. We were attending a ball game at Griffith Stadium in Pete's company, having driven him there in our car. Reilly excused himself in the middle innings, rejoined us a few minutes later. At the game's end, we drove him downtown.

En route to our office, we were mystified, then worried by a horrible rumbling sound in what seemed to be the motor. Reilly suggested that the gears had been stripped, or something. "Sounds bad," he said, "better take this gas-wagon to a garage, quick."

The next day we did make it to a garage. Mechanics found nothing wrong with the motor. It purred beautifully, except when the car was in motion. They went into consultation, decided to investigate the wheels. Ripping off the big, phony hubcaps from the wheels they found the cause of the trouble. In each front hubcap nestled three golf balls, which had been playing a bouncing accompaniment to our travels. Reilly had put them there as his idea of a practical joke.

Pete doesn't kid around, though, when he sets out to collect some fighters for himself. He had Andre Routis, the Frenchman, who won the welterweight championship. When Routis lost his title to Bat Battalino, Reilly bobbed up as the new manager of Battalino. On a night in Cincinnati, Battalino knocked a featherweight named Freddy Miller down five times. Reilly, the next day, took over the management of Miller because, "I like the kind of a kid who can get off the floor five times."

Miller became the featherweight champion under Reilly, but Pete's most valuable chattel was Jack Delaney, the French-Canadian, who used to draw $200,000 gates in the lush days of the mid-twenties. Reilly and Delaney became rich during the era when Delaney was fighting Paul Berlenbach, Jack Sharkey and Jimmie Maloney.

They just missed cleaning up an immense fortune, though. Delaney was known for a terrific right-hand punch, and Reilly had built up the Frenchman as a stalwart, innocent child of the north woods, whose lips had never been sullied by the demon rum. Pete himself was a teetotaler, but Delaney could snort a bit.

Came a fight with big Jimmy Maloney in Madison Square Garden and Delaney was a cinch to win. A knockout would bring him a shot at the heavyweight championship. Reilly had left their Bridgeport, Conn., training camp a few days before the fight, and was in New York plunging on his good thing. The fight was scheduled for 10 rounds, but Delaney never let his right-hand go. Reilly pleaded with him from the corner to let fly with his right and finally Delaney confessed, "I can't Pete—I hurt it before I came into the ring."

Delaney didn't win by a knockout. In fact he lost the decision, Reilly's dough and a shot at the heavyweight title. Seems that Delaney had hurt his hand on the Pullman ride to New York when he was showing off his punch to a colored porter, and smashed his fist against the steel side of the car.

The fact that Wilson is in Reilly's hands won't hurt him. Pete has a way with fighters. He doesn't trifle with those who can't pull in the big dough.

Knocks on Door

Ross Blanks Yanks, 3-0, With 1 Hit

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—Lee (Buck) Ross, a Philadelphia Athletics castoff now laboring for the White Sox—and so lightly regarded that he's not even listed in baseball's "Who's Who"—came within a "fluke" hit today of tossing a no-hitter at the mighty New York Yankees.

The 28-year-old right-hander from Norwood, N. C., pitched to only 28 batters as he gave the White Sox at 3-to-0 victory and handed the Yanks their first whitewashing of the season.

Only Nick Etten, the reformed Philly now handling the first base chores for the American League champs, could do a thing with Buck's "Sunday" shoots. Nick clicked for the only "hit" off Ross, in the second frame, and then became the only other man to reach base by drawing a walk in the eighth.

His second-inning hit, however, was strictly from luck, for it was a bounder that bounced off Ross' pitching hand. At that, Ross recovered the ball and came within inches of catching Etten before he reached first. Nick was wiped out immediately afterward by a double play.

For six innings Buck had to be just as good as he was. In that stretch young Charley Wensloff, up from Kansas City, also served up a one-hitter. But in the seventh, four singles gave the Sox two runs and in the eighth a hit, an error and an infield out produced the other tally.

Tops Field With Card Of 87-12-75

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Alexander Cushing, a resident of the District only since last Christmas, yesterday won the eleventh annual Washington Post Cup Golf Tournament at Kenwood, emerging vitorious in a star-studded field of 35 by a 7-stroke margin.

Mrs. Cushing, who has been playing golf for five years, made The Post Cup her first major tournament victory by putting together rounds of 42 and 45, aided by a 12-stroke handicap, for a net 75, for top honors in the 18-hole medal event.

Formerly from Piping Rock Club, Long Island, the beautiful blonde with the Veronica Lake sweep to her naturally curly tresses, is the wife of Lieut. Alexander Cushing, U. S. N. R., now stationed here at the Navy Department.

Her round of 87 was not only the best round she ever shot in tournament competition but also represented the low gross card for the event. However, ineligible for two prizes under District Golf Association rules, she accepted the handsome Post Cup and the $25 war bond. The low gross prize went to Mrs. Betty P. Meckley of Manor, who carded 89, with her handicaps of only 3; Mrs. Meckley finished tenth in the field.

Mrs. Cushing did not card over a six in spread eagling the field and required the half-dozen strokes on only four holes, carding nine fives, four fours and a pair of trays.

Seven strokes behind in second place was Mrs. K. S. Giles of Indian Spring, with 91—9—82. Mrs. John Ives of Washington, and Mrs. D. H. Henderson of Congressional, tied for third with 83's. Mrs. Ives shot 92 and Mrs. Henderson a 91, with the Washington star enjoying a nine-stroke handicap to eight for Mrs. Henderson.

Mrs. T. B. Banks of Washington, was a stroke behind in fifth place with a card of 102—18—84, a stroke ahead of Mrs. F. L. Williams of Argyle, and Mrs. W. J. Wise of Kenwood, who netted 85's, Mrs. Williams with a 16 handicap against 7 for Mrs. Wise.

Eighth place and final among prize winners was taken by Mrs. C. B. Magruder of Army and Navy, with 97—14—83.

Knock Bagby Out to Get Third Place

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, May 14.—Junior Jim Bagby was only two men away from a shutout today when the Nats suddenly got tough in the ninth inning. They knocked the previously unbeaten Indian hurler out of the box, won the ball game, 3 to 1, and jumped into third place over Detroit, just a half game back of the Indians.

Jake Early picked an opportune moment for his first hit in nine times at bat in the Cleveland series. The bases were loaded with one out when Jake slammed Bagby's first pitch just inside first base and by the time the ball riccocheted off the right-field boxes two runs scored. Johnny Sullivan followed with another single for an insurance run, knocking Bagby out after five successive batters reached first safely.

Yields Nine Hits

Dutch Leonard, the victim of an unearned Cleveland run in the eighth, was the winner although the Indians tagged him for nine hits. Three double plays, including a game-ending twin killing, helped Dutch out of tight spots and gave him his third victory of the year.

The Nats had advanced only one runner past second base against Bagby in the first eight innings and when Mickey Vernon lofted a high fly to center to start the ninth the ladies' day crowd of 2500 made for the exits.

Bob Johnson gave the Nats life when he waited for a base on balls and Gerry Priddy slapped a solid single to right field, sending Johnson to third and Priddy took second when Ken Keltner fumbled the throw attempting to catch Johnson.

Managerial wits took over here with Bluege sending Gene Moore to bat for Ellis Clary and Boudreau ordered an intentional pass loading the bases. Early then broke his hit famine with his first safety in the Middle West and Johnson and Priddy scampered home. Sullivan followed with his second single, scoring Moore and retiring Bagby. Big Mike Naymick took over and retired the side—but it was late.

Indians Get Run

Cleveland broke up the scoreless duel in the eighth with a tainted run. Buddy Rosar led off with a hit to Johnny Sullivan's right and when Sullivan stopped the ball and attempted to toss Rosar out the throw was wild and Rosar continued to second. Ray Mack flied out and Bagby, with two straight hits was out on a slow roller to Clary Rosar taking third.

Oris Hockett, who holds a place in the five leading hitters, fortified his position with a long single to left which scored Rosar with the first run of the ball game.

Leonard was not at his best today but the Nats replied with some fancy fielding behind the big Dutchman. He escaped trouble in the first inning when Boudreau doubled with one out and took third on a passed ball, but Mickey Vernon picked up Jeff Heath's grounder, stepped on first and rifled a perfect peg to Early to catch Boudreau at the plate.

Dutch invited an Indian uprising in the third when Bagby and Hockett hit successive singles with one gone but Boudreau hit into a force play and Early embarrassed the Indian pilot before his feminine admirers by picking Boudreau off first base.

OPA Clarifies Gas Regulations For Fishing Boats

The OPA yesterday clarified its announcement that gas would be allowed to commercial fishermen to take out fishing parties.

Such fishermen must be those who earn the major portion of their living by commercial fishing and "not merely someone who owns a commercial fishing license," the OPA said. Captains cannot expect gas on the strength of the fact that fish were turned over to them for sale when fishermen completed their trips.

It said, however, that gas would not be denied commercial fishermen merely because they took sports fishermen out. Since most of the charter boat men in Chesapeake area fish commercially for a greater part of their livelihood, the interpretation indicates that most of the Chesapeake's charter fleet will be in operation.

Giants Defeat Cubs, 3-2, and Quit Cellar

By International News Service

New York, May 14.—The New York Giants whipped the Chicago Cubs today, 3 to 2, to emerge from the National League cellar into seventh place and leave the Cubs at the bottom.

Bill Lohrman and Hiram Bithorn pitched an eight-inning duel. In the ninth, Bithorn was relieved by the Cubs' Ray Prim after being hit for singles by Mel Ott and Ernie Lombardi, who had hammered out home runs earlier. Babe Barna then drove in the winning run.

Whoopee! We're Out-hit

They're still paying off on runs, not hits. That was the forcible reminder in the big leagues yesterday when, in five of the six games played, the teams making the most hits lost.

The Nats, Athletics, Giants, Braves and Pirates were outhit by their opposition, but won. The other team that was outhit yesterday was the Yankees, who lost. But the Yanks could hardly expect to get into the win column. They barely got into the hit column, with their one hit.

Eastern Beats Briarley, 11-4

A seven run outburst in the last half of the eighth inning turned a pitchers' duel into an 11-4 walkaway for Eastern yesterday, as the Ramblers defeated Briarley Prep, on the Eastern diamond.

Bucky Glorious and Russ Cordua had twirled excellent ball for seven innings for Eastern and Briarley respectively, prior to the eighth frame assault.

A's Squeeze Win in 12th Over Tigers

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 14.—Pete Suder, refusing to become discouraged, squeezed home Johnny Welaj with a run off the Veteran Tommy Bridges in the twelfth inning today to give the Philadelphia Athletics a 7 to 6 vitcory over the Detroit Tigers and a 2 to 1 series edge.

Suder, whose sixth inning homer had put the Macks in front after his two-run single in the fourth had erased a Detroit lead, saw his offensive punch undone several times. But his well placed bunt broke up the third successive extra inning game between the rivals and gave Luman Harris his first 1943 victory.

Detroit, gathering 16 safeties off Harris, came from behind both in the eighth and ninth inning to go into its fourth straight overtime affair. The defeat was Bridges' second against one victory.

Pat Malone, Noted Hurler, Is Dead at 40

By the Associated Press

Altoona, Pa., May 14.—Perce (Pat) Malone, 40, whose happy-go-lucky career as a pitcher for the Chicago Cubs and New York Yankees ended in a physical breakdown in 1937, died last night of acute pancreatitis.

Malone helped pitch the Cubs to National League pennants in 1929 and 1932, later going to the Yankees for three years. He played in three World Series and won 134 games and lost 92 during his 10 years in the major leagues.

After ill health forced his retirement in 1937 at the age of 35, he operated a cafe here for a time. Stricken ill Wednesday at his farm home outside nearby Hollidaysburg, where he lived with his wife, he died six hours after being brought to Altoona Hospital.

Wilson's Protege On Turner's Card

Billy Bates, up and coming lightweight from Pittsburgh and a protege and stablemate of former featherweight champion Jackie Wilson, has been signed for an eight round bout with Baltimore Sammy Daniels next Monday night at Griffith Stadium on Promoter Joe Turner's first outdoor card, featuring the 10-rounder involving Wilson and Danny Petro, local kayo artist.

Charley Petro, welterweight, brother of Danny, also was signed yesterday for an eight-round shot, meeting Joey Sole, Richmond soldier.

Walk Gives Tech Win Over Gonzaga

A walk to Norman Brown with the bases loaded in the last half of the ninth inning and the game deadlocked at 2-all, gave Tech a well-earned 3-2 victory over Gonzaga, on the Tech diamond. Elmer Raba, eagle hurler forced Joe Tulenko home with the winning count to end a pitching duel between himself and Dan O'Connell.

Braves Edge Cards in 10th Inning, 4-3

By International News Service

Boston, May 1.—Chuck Workman rapped a single with two out and the bases loaded to give the Braves a 10-inning, 4-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals today.

Al Javery, big right-hander, hurled the win for the Braves against Max Lanier, Card southpaw.

The Cards took a one-run lead in the sixth and bounced back to tie the game up in the seventh after the Braves had scored three runs in the sixth.

Pat Regal's Check for $10,000 Tops Bids For Presidential Box at Bond Ball Game

Sports Enthusiast Invites Others to Join Competition

For the honor of occupying the White House box at Griffith Stadium and tossing out the first ball at the war bond game between the Nats and the Norfolk Naval Training Station team on the night of May 24, The Post yesterday received a bid of $10,000.

A check for that amount for the purchase of war bonds was forwarded to The Post by Pat Regal, president of the Regal Clothing Co., Inc., and long identified with athletics in Washington.

Mr. Regal, in a letter to Shirley Povich, sports columnist of The Post, wrote, "I have always been interested in sports and it has been my privilege during recent years to help deserving amateur athletes achieve fame and recognition.

"Well, we're in the biggest game of our lives right now". Mr. Regal added, "It's for keeps and there are a lot of fellows out there giving their lives in this game. The least the rest of us can do is lend our dollars.

"The other day Mr. Edgar Morris sent you a check for $5000 for the President's box at the war bond game. I'd like that box, too—so here is my check for $10,000. I hope that wins it, but if somebody else bids higher, just send me my bonds and a couple of tickets. I'll be there rooting just the same."

Like Mr. Morris, originator of the plan to auction off the flag-bedecked Presidential box, Mr. Regal invites others to top his offer.

Central High Yields Game On Forfeit

Western High yesterday regained its possible playoff chance in the morning and then definitely threw it away in the afternoon. The Raiders got their chance when Coach John Jankowski of Central voluntarily forfeited his team's 12-8, 11-inning victory last Tuesday when he discovered that on eof his players was scholastically ineligible Then, in the Anacostia-Western game, the Indians pulled another big upset when they defeated the Raiders, 8-2.

The Central-Western game will be replayed next Wednesday as a result of another very sportsmanlike act. Coach Billy Richardson and the Western principal agreed that they would replay last Tuesday's game. The game is reset for next Wednesday.

In the other half of yesterday's twin bill, Wilson also kept its playoff hopes alive by beating Coolidge, 12-0. Jack Ogle, who won his second series start, scattered three hits and fanned 11. In two series encounters he has not given an earned run and has only been nicked for seven hits.

Home Run Starts It

A home run by Wilson's third sacker, Bill Torrey, started a scoring spree in the first inning which never cooled off. Torrey's clout came with Julian Owens on base and gave the Tigers a lead which was never threatened. Wilson sent four more markers across in the third on four safeties. Big blow of the inning was "Monk" Barbee's terrific homer with two mates on base.

Anacostia Wins

Three runs in the first frame were all that Anacostia needed to win its second game of the series from Western. Joe Himmelberg again hurled an outstanding game yesterday and held the Raiders to six hits. Although he walked eight, he was nicked for runs only in the eighth, when both Western tallies came across.

The Indians clinched the game with a brace of scores in the second and fourth innings. Pete Kitka, Bill Sweeney and Johnny Mathieson led the winners' at bat with a pair of safeties each. Randy Fones, who started for Western, was charged with the loss. Basil James and Gould divided the remainder of the game on the hill for Western.

Regal Offers $10,000 for Box

Tickets issued by the banks are exchangeable for seats at the Griffith Stadium box offices.

The game committee emphasized yesterday that thousands of desirable seats are still available to bond buyers.

The committee stresses the fact that the reserved grandstand seats which go to purchasers of the $50 bonds, are among the choicest seats in the stadium, as are many of the $25 pavilion and bleacher seats.

The Navy Band has been obtained for a pregame concert along with other program features to be announced over the weekend. Early comers to the game also will be entertained by the famed clowning act of Al Schacht, who is making the trip to Washington at his own expense.

Coolidge Golfers Win

Led by Lee Everett, Calvin Coolidge golfers yesterday defeated the St. John's linksmen, 7-2, at Manor. Everett had low card of 78.

The results:

B. Clark (St. J.) defeated Black, 1 up in 9 holes; Everett (C.) defeated Rhodes, 3 and 2. Best ball—Coolidge, 3 and 2.

McDowell (C.) defeated D. Clark, 1 up. Kush (C.) defeated Thomas, 1 up in 20 holes. Best ball—Coolidge, 1 up.

Weisberg (C.) defeated Warner, 9 and 7. Fiscbell (St. J.) defeated Robineau, 6 and 4. Best ball—Coolidge, 9 and 4.

283 Athletics to Vie In 'C' Games Today

With 21 schools represented by 283 young athletes, the twenty-fifth annual "C" Club Track and Field Meet will be held today at Central Stadium. Festivities will get under way at 1 o'clock.

The boys, many of whom will be participating in their last meet for the duration, will be giving their all not only for the individual medals, but for the nine trophies. Foremost among these is the Emory Wilson Memorial Trophy which goes to the winning team. The winner also receives the Cornell Alumni Trophy for one year. Among other trophies are George Hamilton Memorial Trophy to the second place team, Bill Foley and Cy MacDonald awards to the third place team and the public high school winner, respectively.

Trophies will also be given in the three relay events as will silver statuettes to the winning quartets. The Al Hayden Trophy, one of the most prized of the meet, will go to the winner of the 440-yard dash.

Three Virginia teams, Washington-Lee, Woodberry Forest and Staunton, have been installed as cofavorites. The Generals are the class of local squads and have one of the best teams ever turned out by Coach "Pop" Deming. Woodberry Forest, State champion, has its entire team here and is strong in all events. Staunton is represented by only seven men, but these seven will definitely be heard from. Floyd (Chuck) Simmons, who has tallied 119 points in four meets, will lead Staunto and is a threat to the two hurdle records. Baltimore Poly, last year's winner, also has a strong team entered and could possibly repeat its 1942 victory.

Woodrow Wilson and Roosevelt have been the most impressive of the local public high schools and are cofavorites in their class. Tech, defending interhigh champion, and Central, which was third in last year's "C" Meet, are rated dark horses.

Several special events will be featured throughout the afternoon. Among them is the "free-for-all" race for servicemen and events between the Maryland and Catholic University thinclads. Greg Rice, who had originally been scheduled to run, but had to withdraw due to a pulled tendon in his leg, will be on hand as an official.

Tickets are still on sale at the Sports Center, Eighth and D Streets Northwest, at 55 cents for adults and 25 cent for students. All servicemen will be admitted free.

Pirates Beat Dodgers, 5-2; Fat Fitz Fails

By The Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 14.—Bidding for a chance to stay on the active Brooklyn player roster, fat Freddie Fitzsimmons made his first pitching start today since May 1, 1942, but the Pittsburgh Pirates and "old pop time" caught up with him in less than four innings.

The Pirates took just that long to score all their runs and go on to a 5-to-2 victory over the Dodgers behind Hank Gornicki's seven-hit hurling. And 41-year-old Freddie was the losing twirler, although he was nowhere around when the final tally was hung up.

In the first inning, he walked Elbie Fletcher and served up a home-run ball to Bob Elliott for the first two Buc runs. In the fourth, he walked Frank Gustine and Pete Coscarart in order and then Al Lopez whacked him for a solid single to center to send in a run. That was the end for Fat Freddie, the most popular man on the Dodger roster.

Selections at Charles Town

First race—AMPLIFY has plenty of speed and belongs on top in this company. NOM DE PLUME deserves attention. FOX MEADOW may take care of the show end.

Second race—CLEANING TIME, second last out, appears suited by these conditions and I see no reason for mistakes. PLACEMENT for the minor award.

Third race—MOLASSES MIBS should take care of this company. J. HAL probably needed that last and is dangerous. SEVEN SEAS is fast and may have to be caught.

Fourth race—MANNY B. raced evenly last out and likes this short route. I'm going to string along. GREY FLASH and SWEET ZACA to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—TECO TACK is rounding into shape and seems ready to trim these. GLITTER GIRL always goes well hereabouts. FAIRY BAY for the show end.

Sixth race—The Wynkoop-Strother entry of LORD VATOUT and WISE TIMMIE appear capable of turning back this field. I'll take either one. SUNSET BOY and HIGH STANDARD are due some respect.

Seventh race—WELL ALLRIGHT and CHOP STICKS are a tight fit in this event. I'll take them in the order named. TOY QUAY should better that last.

Eighth race—G. C. HAMILTON has the No. 1 post position and may take it all. PHANTOM PLAYER is the one to beat but may be hampered by the outside post. WAR GRAND to show.

Best bet—TECO TACK.

Roosevelt Fielder Pitches 5-3 Win

Charley Howard, Roosevelt's star outfielder, yesterday turned pitcher and hurled the Riders to a 5-3 victory over Devitt Prep, on the Roosevelt diamond. Roosevelt clinched the game with two runs in each of the first two innings and another in the fourth. Howard was effective until the seventh when Devitt got two of its three markers.

Frozen to His Post!

Philadelphia (A.P.).—Thomas Folweiler, 17, has a frost-bitten hand—but the weather's not to blame. An ice cream vending machine into which he plunked a nickel jammed and his hand got stuck trying to pry loose a package. Firemen worked half an hour and finally demolished the machine before freeing him.

Second Cup of Coffee—$18.75

Long-distance truckers always have been big coffee drinkers. They have to be to stay awake. Restaurants along the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard have been capitalizing on this fact lately. Second cup of coffee: $18.75—for a war bond. And they sell plenty of second cups.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Scores of Agencies Face Delay in Pay

Employes in a score of Federal agencies face delayed paydays unless the urgent deficiency bill is speedily approved by Congress. The bill carries an appropriation of $121,899,000 to foot the cost of overtime pay for Federal workers as many agencies will need the money to meet payrolls after May 15. Testifying before the House Appropriations Committee in defense of the overtime appropriation, Leo C. Martin, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, said that "most of the agencies can meet the May 15 payroll, though several are going to be pressed for money, but the May 30 payrolls are going to be a little late." Martin told the committee that the Congress would have to pass the bill by May 20 to prevent any serious dislocation and that's next to impossible.

However, if there is sufficient money in the President's confidential fund it could be used to meet the payrolls and the agencies could reimburse the fund when the urgent appropriation bill became law. In fact, the committee put a rider on the bill which gave the agencies authority to draw from the President's fund to meet their payrolls. It couldn't be determined yesterday whether sufficient funds will be available if the deficiency bill gets tied up, but every effort will be made to get them from somewhere. Among the agencies that are about out of payroll money are: Office of Censorship, BEW, OPA, WPB, Civil Service, NLRB, Post Office, Veterans, Federal Security, Federal Works, Agriculture, Commerce, State and Treasury.

War Production Board's 1944 budget calls for a reduction of another 1000 employes, which would bring the agency below the 20,000 figure. WPB asked for $97,500,000 and the President recommended $89,500,000 . . . Federal Works Agency is setting up several work projects for Puerto Rico . . . Manpower Boss Paul McNutt has asked industry to give employes leaves of absence to plant and harvest small farms. Several Federal employes—one at Manpower—report they have been denied leave for similar purposes . . . The Ramspeck Committee is making an investigation of the recent dismissals ordered by the Budget Bureau to see whether if only the littlewigs, as reported, were fired and the bigwigs escaped the ax.

This is the final overall statement on the GOVERNMENT GIRL campaign, but individual amounts will be reported as they trickle in. The total last night stood at $157,560.62, which is enough to buy and fully equip the two fighter planes the Government employes gave to the Army and the Navy. However, we expect additional contributions will be made to the fund and they'll be earmarked by the Treasury Department and perhaps we can buy another plane some day if the worst happens and one of our GOVERNMENT GIRLS gets shot down.

Gas Dealers' Stocks Run Low Here

Ickes Acts to Give Area Farmers Enough Fuel For Planting Needs

While shortages of gasoline in other sections of the Eastern seaboard were forcing filling stations to close, Washington dealers were still able to meet the demands of customers yesterday, although their stocks were running low, officials of the AAA reported.

Relief for farmers in southern Maryland whose tractors have been idle due to gasoline shortages was seen yesterday by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat) of Maryland, who said he had received a telegram from C. A. Lockard, petroleum administrator for war, regional office, New York, saying the gasoline situation in the Maryland district was being given especial attention and some relief should have been obtained yesterday.

Sasscer, however, was unable to say where the gasoline would come from when informed that stocks in all nearby localities also were either low or nonexistent.

Farmers Get Priority

In the meantime the Petroleum Administrator for War Harold Ickes issued an order placing farmers in the same preferential category as the Army and Navy in obtaining gasoline.

Meeting these demands can mean only that other civilian users will find empty tanks when they go to refill.

Ickes' order was issued to insure use of tractors during the vital planting season.

In the meantime Ickes said that stocks of petroleum products in the East had reached 5.5 per cent of normal, an all-time low.

As a result he said it was unthinkable to consider increasing gasoline allowances for civilian use and further it would be difficult to assure a supply for essential use.

He anticipates the shortage will be only temporary and has asked all motorists in the East to restrict themselves to absolutely essential driving.

Despite the fact that tank car shipments last week to the East reached a new high of 965,582 barrels daily, a boost of 2784 barrels, demands from all sources had increased in greater proportion with a consequent sharp reduction in fuel for civilian usage.

Baby's Pleasure-Riding Abruptly Halted When Kitten Brood Confiscates Carriage

Baby Neil Bressler (7 months) shares carriage with five new-born kittens and their mama.

Seven-month-old Neil Bressler's vocabulary is a limited one, but yesterday he was undoubtedly thinking that Washington's renowned housing shortage had come to a pretty pass when a mother cat chose to convert his baby carriage into a home for her five kittens.

The cat, a once-white specimen of the variety known as "alley," had previously resided in the vicinity of 220 Hamilton Street Northwest, where Neil and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bressler, also live, but, according to observers had no place she could call home.

Why she chose Neil's carriage from a group of such vehicles in the hall of the apartment house is a mystery to Mrs. Bressler and a source of amusement to her neighbors. But it evidently provided the proper atmosphere for her vari-colored offspring, and yesterday she appeared quite content with her choice and indisposed to removal. She refused to be approached on the matter of property rights.

Meanwhile Neil is forgoing his usual morning rides as Mrs. Bressler wonders just how long cat and kittens will maintain their current residence. She is no authority on cats, and doesn't care to become one. What with food rationing, housing shortages and such, husband Louis, son Neil and daughter Dobra constitute a sufficiently large family, felt Mrs. Bressler, without the unsolicited additions.

Last Obstacle To Viereck's Trial Removed

The Secretary of State is "legally and authoritatively" within his rights to "call upon . . . agents of foreign principals to disclose all of their principals" when they register as foreign agents. Justice Bolitha J. Laws stated yesterday, overruling a demurrer by George Sylvester Viereck against the Federal indictment charging him with violation of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Furthermore, Justice Laws' statement said, "the purpose of the statute (Foreign Agents Registration Act) . . . clearly was to require registration, during time of war, of agents in the United States who were acting for foreign principals, so that dissemination of propaganda . . . might become known and be investigated."

By failing to disclose the names of all Nazi sources for which he worked, and by neglecting to give a "comprehensive statement" of his business (Viereck registered as "author and journalist") the German agent, in Justice Laws' opinion, "violated the statute as well as the command of the Secretary of State."

With the demurrer thrown out, the last obstacle to Viereck's trial is removed. As tentatively set by Justice Laws it will be held in District Court on June 7.

The agent was given a possible defense for his violation of the Foreign Agents Act when Justice Laws in his statement denying the demurrer conceded that if Viereck did not fully understand the act's requirements and was acting in "good faith," he could use that fact in his defense during the trial.

Picnics and Fishing Parties Weekend Favorites at USO Club

Highlight of the many USO-sponsored weekend activities for servicemen in the District are the picnics and fishing parties now being featured on the Sunday programs at Service Men's Club No. 1, 306 Ninth Street Northwest.

Victory Sidelights

Civilian Volunteers Needed To Aid Mailing of Ration Books

An urgent appeal for volunteers to assist in preparing and mailing War Ration Book No. 3 between June 10 and July 15 has been issued by the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office at 2324 F Street Northwest.

Persons able to donate their services in that period were asked to call Republic 5105 to register. Shifts will be from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 10 p. m.

The work will be done at the Heurich gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, which was donated by Christian Heurich for the purpose.

Plenty of Quinine

Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy, accompanied by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Representative Andrew J. May (Demorat) of Kentucky, yesterday visited the American Institute of Pharmacy's quinine stockpile here and declared that the 110,000 ounces collected since February 1 was enough to supply a campaign as large as the North African.

Shipment of the quinine, donated by thousands of pharmacists all over the country, to processors is expected later this month when the amount will be several thousands of ounces more than the present on the basis of daily donations. Some nine million 5-grain doses will be packaged from the present stockpile, it was said.

Extended Furloughs

Fourteen-day preinduction furloughs for new inductees will go into effect in the District on May 24, a spokesman for the Third Service Command in Baltimore told The Post yesterday.

Throughout the Third Service Command area, extended furloughs will begin on a staggered basis from May 17 until June 1, it was announced. Maryland men will get the longer period on May 17, and other sections will follow gradually.

The order to increase furloughs was given Thursday by the War Department, which specified that it would take effect immediately in many places, and that the whole Nation would be granting 14-day leaves when desired by July 1. Between July 1 and September 1, the time will be extended to 21 days, the announcement said.

General Fuqua's Funeral Today

Maj. Gen. Stephen O. Fuqua, former Army chief of infantry who died Tuesday in New York, will be buried at Arlington Cemetery at 10 a. m. today. Funeral services with full military honors were held for the general at Fort Jay, Governors Island, N. Y., yesterday.

The Episcopal rites were attended by high military officials. The flag-draped casket was carried from the Fort's chapel by six colonels acting as honorary pallbearers.

Dance for Bonds

A dance and war bond rally will be held by the Twelfth Precinct Pistol Club, Metropolitan Police Department, tonight at Prince Georges Country Club. Dancing will be from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. Prizes will be given to those buying the most bonds.

Mrs. Steinberger Buried in Kansas

Funeral services for Mrs. Ida Steinberger, 89, who died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allen D. Jones, 3619 T Street Northwest, were held this week in Tulsa, Okla. Burial was in Howard, Kans.

A native of Stevens Point, Wis., she was the wife of Aaron Beaver Steinberger, prominent newspaperman of Kansas.

Besides her daughter, she is survived by two sons, Clinton C. Steinberger, Houston, Tex., and L. Lorn Steinberger, Los Angeles, Calif.

Senate Group Weighs GPO Raise Plea

Union Seeks 15% Increase For 8000 Workers In Printing Office

The Joint Committee on Printing is considering demands for for a raise of 15 per cent for 4,000 per diem workers in the Government Printing Office, following a hearing yesterday attended by 200 delegates.

Union representatives said that the Joint Committee, headed by Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, has authority to order the increase. The raise was refused by Public Printer A. E. Giegengack in February, 1942, and employes originally appealed to the Joint Committee last October.

Requests for increased wages were based on the increased cost of living here. Union leaders pointed out that no raises had been granted under the Little Steel formula, which covered the increased cost of living between January, 1941, and May, 1942. In fact, spokesmen said, the workers had not received a wage increase for 17 years, although an A. F. L. survey showed a 36.5 increase in living costs here since January, 1941.

A. F. L. President William Green selected John B. Haggerty of the International Allied Printing Trades Association; N. P. Alifas, International Association of Machinists, and John J. McCurry, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to represent the G. P. O. workers.

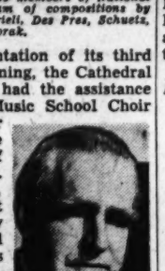
Postlude

200 Singers Give Concert In Cathedral

By Ray C. B. Brown

Cathedral Choral Society (Paul Callaway, conductor), assisted by Army Music School Choir (William Strickland, conductor), presents a program of religious music on Friday night in Washington Cathedral. Soloists: Dorothy Baker and Edwin C. Steffe. Organist: Richard Purvis. Orchestra of 35 members of National Symphony. Program of compositions by Mozart, Byrd, Gabrieli, Des Pres, Schuetz, Strickland and Dvorak.

In the presentation of its third concert last evening, the Cathedral Choral Society had the assistance of the Army Music School Choir from Fort Myer to augment the number of voices to 200. Paul Callaway, the permanent conductor, now in the armed service, was present to direct the two major works on the program: Mozart's Litany in B flat and Dvorak's Te Deum, which had adequate instrumental disclosure by 35 members of the National Symphony Orchestra and Richard Purvis at the organ. Despite the perturbing echoes in the cathedral, the merits of the performance were such as to show the increasing efficacy of the chorus. The solo parts were sung well by Dorothy Baker, soprano, and Edwin C. Steffe, barytone.



BROWN

There was much of interest in the program which was so arranged as to contrast different styles in ecclesiastical music. The Mozart Litany is remarkable for two things: the security and the beauty of the writing by a 16-year-old boy, and the amount of florid Italian ornamentation. The latter is explicable as the result of Mozart's recent visit to Italy with his father and by the fact that the new archbishop in Salzburg, Count Hieronymus von Colloredo, was fond of the Italian style and relaxed the severity of his predecessor toward church music. Although the score as we have it is said to have been revised later by the composer, it is still noteworthy among his early works.

After the refulgence of the fugal "Pignus Futurae Gloriae" came the quietude of four motets sung a cappella by the Army Music School choir directed by William Strickland. All of them were by composers antedating Bach: "Ave Verum Corpus" by William Byrd, "Jubilate Deo" by Giovanni Gabrieli, "Tu Pauperum Refugium" by Josquin des Pres and "Give Ear, O Lord" by Heinrich Schuetz. Mr. Strickland also conducted the massed chorus in two canticles of praise written by himself.

While "Benedictus es Domine" and "Jubliate Deo" have been sung by church choirs, this was the first time that they had been performed with the original orchestration. They are skillfully written works both as to voice parts and instrumentation with considerable brilliance in coloring and a few touches of modern harmony.

Dvorak's fervent Te Deum, which was published as Opus 103 and therefore stands in the list of his works several numbers after the "New World" symphony, was actually composed almost a year before. After he had accepted the invitation of Mrs. Jeanette Thurber to head the National Conservatory in New York, he was asked to bring with him a new choral setting of John Rodman Drake's "The American Flag" to be performed at his first concert. This he agreed to do but the promised text did not reach him in time. Rather than appear with empty hands, he composed the Te Deum between June 25 and July 28, 1892.

Robert F. Cahill's Funeral Services Scheduled Monday

Funeral services for Robert F. Cahill, who died Thursday night, will be held Monday at 10 a. m. at Our Lady of Victory Church, Conduit and Reservoir Roads Northwest. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Cahill, member of a brokerage firm and son-in-law of Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, died in his automobile from a heart attack, a short distance from his house at 4938 Quebec Street.

He was the son of the late James A. Cahill, a Washington banker, and a brother of the late Dr. James A. Cahill, jr. He was associate manager of Laidlaw & Co., 821 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

Memorial For Leonard Is Approved

A $500,000 fund for establishing a "Christian Education Foundation" in memory of Bishop Adna Wright Leonard was approved yesterday by the annual Peninsula Methodist Conference, a part of the Washington Methodist area, the Associated Press reported from Wilmington, Del. The prelate, Washington Methodist resident bishop, died recently in a plane crash in Iceland.

T. Blair Ely of Wilmington proposed the fund to promote scholarships and Christian projects in which the bishop was interested. Bishop Leonard was president of the board of education of the Methodist Church and of the board of trustees of American University.

Appointed to a committee to organize and incorporate the foundation were Ely, J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield, Maryland State comptroller; the Rev. J. J. Bunting, Elkton, and the Rev. O. A. Barclay, president of Wesley Junior College, Dover, Del.

Former Car Stop Requested

Loss of five minutes working time in coming from the underground streetcar terminal at Fourteenth and C Streets Northwest was cited by representatives of the Department of Agriculture yesterday as a reason for asking for a rescinding of the order banning rush hour use of a car stop at Fourteenth Street and Jefferson Drive.

The Public Utilities Commission conducted a hearing on the request to rescind the order, which had been issued as result of a report of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic asserting that streams of workers crossing Fourteenth Street to the car stop in the rush hour created a dangerous traffic condition.

Joining in the protest on the ban were representatives of the Smithsonian Institution and the Medical Museum.

Dr. Price Honored

Dr. David J. Price, principal chemical engineer of the Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, was nominated for president of the Board of Directors of the National Fire Protection Association at the association's convention in Chicago this week.

Man Sentenced

Cleveland Adams, 24, Negro, of 617 L Street Northwest, was sentenced to serve from six to seven years in prison yesterday by Justice Mathew F. McGuire, in District Court, after he had pleaded guilty to cutting out the eye of Tom Sam, operator of a Chinese laundry at 403 K Street Northwest. The charge was assault with a dangerous weapon.

The dispute arose when the laundryman refused to deliver a shirt without a laundry ticket, the court was told. In addition to his eye injury, Tom Sam also had a broken arm sustained when Adams caught a brick Tom Sam threw at him and threw it back. Tom Sam's action was taken in an effort to protect himself, he told the court.

Four Youths Sentenced

Four youths received sentences of from three to nine years yesterday from Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court after they pleaded guilty to participating in the robbery of a Western Union branch and three of them admitted the holdup of a taxicab driver.

The five sentenced were: Joseph F. Haislipp, 22, 473 H Street Southwest; Fred Henson, 19, 457 I Street Southwest; Ernest Dorsey, 19, 502 I Street Southwest; Edward P. Scherzer, 19, 626 Sith Street Southwest and George Cook, 19, whose last address was the National Training School.

Jerry Cullinane Requiem Mass at St. Anthony's

Requiem mass will be said for Jerry J. Cullinane, 37, Metropolitan policeman, at 9:30 today in St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast. Burial will be in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Cullinane, who was attached to the Fifth Precinct, had been with the police department for 13 years and lived at 4506 South Dakota Avenue Northeast. He died Wednesday. His father, Dennis J. Cullinane, was retired as a lieutenant of the police department a few years ago, while a brother, John Cullinane is attached to the Second Precinct.

He also is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Daisey Cullinane; his mother, Mrs. Mary Cullinane and another brother, Roger Cullinane, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Myer.

Forced Wine Sales Face ABC Probe

Liquor Board Investigating Complaints of Whisky Buyers

The District ABC Board yesterday began an investigation into the wholesale-retail liquor dealers' relationship, following the disclosure in The Post that at least one liquor store had tried to make customers buy slow-selling wine or brandy with each bottle of Bourbon.

The board's chief concern is not so much with the individual cases of retailers trying to force tie-in sales on customers, as with similar pressure that might have been applied to the retailers by wholesale dealers.

"We are going to find out what this all means," ABC member Agnes K. Mason said. "We have heard rumors of this nature, but this is the first time we have had enough information to work on."

Meanwhile, wholsesale liquor dealers in general scoffed at the idea that retailers had been high-pressured into taking wines if they wanted to renew their stocks of whiskey. Distributors insisted there is a shortage of wines and brandies and such methods would be superfluous. In fact, one declared that by the end of the year wines would be so much in demand that stores would be urged to take whiskey along with sherry or port.

One wholesaler, however, said that undoubtedly some warehouses have poor grade wine that had never sold. "This might seem a good opportunity to unload it," he commented.

The Office of Price Administration, which is formulating price ceilings on liquors, said yesterday that such tie-in sales were in violation of its regulation. Although a ceiling, based on the March, 1942 price maximums, has been in effect for over a year, this has been so disregarded that a new list of ceilings is in preparation.

House Gets $121,899,751 Deficiency Bill

A deficiency appropriation bill, carrying the sum of $121,899,751 to meet wartime pay increases for Federal employes, was reported to the House by the Appropriations Committee yesterday.

The bill carried a total request for $134,141,279.88. It will be rushed so that it can become law before June 1, congressional leaders said, because a large portion of the funds will be needed to meet payrolls for the second part of May.

The deficiency bill also carried a request for $2,079,800 to meet the operation and maintenance of public buildings.

The sum of $313,260 was requested for the District, and $229,500 for conversion of Howard University's oil-burning plant to coal.

For trees, parking, and salaries from the highway funds $740 is allotted. The sum of $49,800 is requested for Washington aqueduct.

Other items are: Division of Child Welfare, detention of children, $1050; Municipal Lodging House, $470; National Zoological Park, $7690; Commission on Mental Health, $130; Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, $110.

Jam Session For Hepcats Is Scheduled

A scheduled jam session at Constitution Hall jammed yesterday when permission for the jive concert was suddenly withheld, Jim Walter, representative of the promoter of the affair, announced.

Walter said he had been told by the hall manager, Frederick Hand, that no down payment had been made for the use of the hall and as the "concert" was scheduled for May 17, there was not now sufficient time to submit the matter of permitting the hall, for the use of hep cats and jazz musicians, to the D. A. R. committee in New York and obtain their approval.

Walter quoted Hand as saying there was no written contract, which Walter said was true, but added there had been a verbal agreement.

At any rate, the show will now be held on May 17 at Uline's Arena.

In the meantime, Dick O'Connell, promoter of the affair, has spent $1100 advertising the show in newspaper ads and otherwise, all ads giving the location as Constitution Hall.

Tickets sold in advance sales will be accepted and seats corresponding to those bought in Constitution Hall supplied at Uline's, Walter said.

Efforts to reach Hand, both at his home and at Constitution Hall, were fruitless.

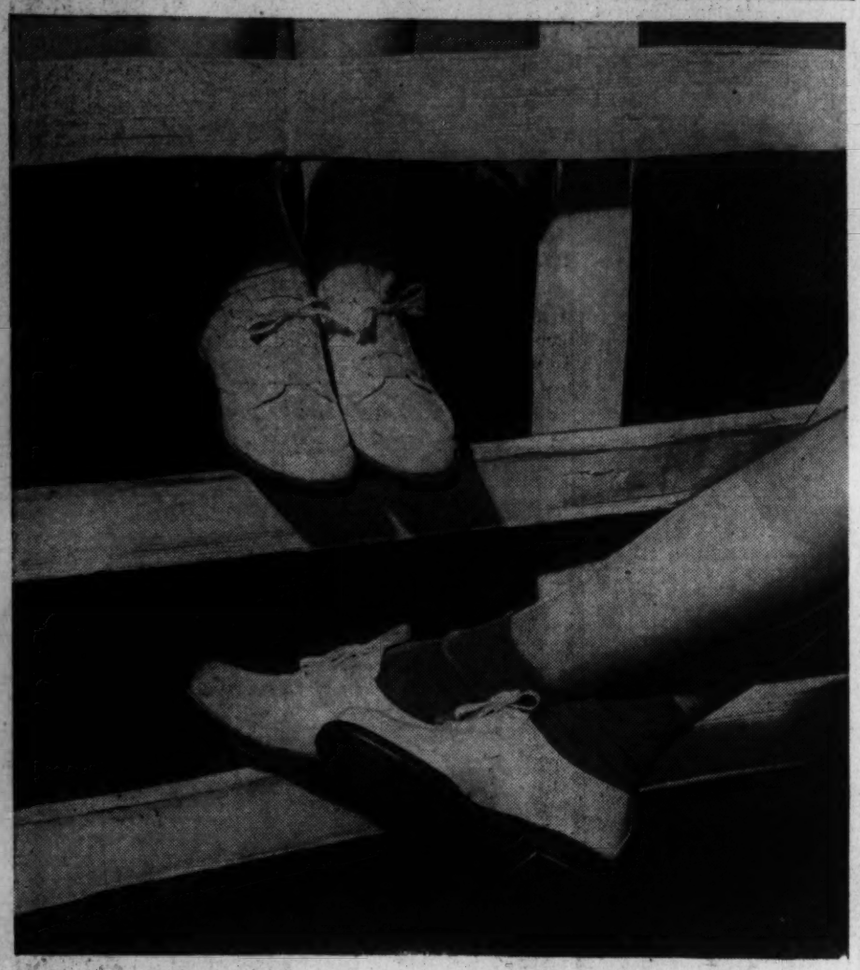
Boots and Saddle Department



By Jeanne Contini

The old brown-and-white oxford that has clumped its way across every campus and suburb of the United States has been whitewashed for the duration. Bicolored leathers were temporarily ruled out, you'll remember. Although at first glance these may look a trifle too clean for the tastes of the younger generation, we are not worried about their finding a quick remedy. (Sorry, the white uppers are washable.)

These come in two classic styles, i. e. the saddle and the moccasin, and it's a toss-up which is better or more comfortable. The licorice black soles are made of a rubber composition which is long-wearing, resilient, and apparently has enough gumption to balance the slippery surfaces of fences and juke-box parlors. Either pair . . . under $5.

Woman War Correspondent

This is the sixth article in a series by Inez Robb describing her experiences as a woman war correspondent on the North African front.

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

Oscar Wilde opined that a coward dies a thousand deaths; a brave man but once."

If Oscar is right—and I didn't think he was—I died every morning at 6:30 as long as I lived in my tent in the forward areas in North Africa. At that witching hour, by sheer will power, I forced myself out of the cocoon of Army blankets in which I had spent the night.

Stumbling about the icy tent, I took off the night-time layer of clothing and put on the day shift—over my red flannels! First came a heavy wool shirt, and over that a pull-on sweater. Then I put on the regulation cotton stockings prescribed for the WAAC officer's uniform in which the Government had finally decided to dress me just before sailing for Africa.

Every time I put on those stockings I compressed my lips, closed my eyes and grimly remembered the advertising slogan pinned to the top of the stockings when I bought them at the officers' post exchange at an East Coast point of embarkation.

"For victory," it had read. "Remember Pearl Harbor."

With Pearl Harbor firmly in mind, I yanked those stockings on every day for three months. But I never learned to love them!

Now I was ready for my slacks, then my shoes and overshoes, next the blouse of my winter-weight WAAC uniform and, finally, my trench coat with the heavy interlining. Finally, my hair combed and my face on straight (and I was never too cold to put on my lipstick!) I pulled my knit cap over my ears and was ready to race off to the morning chow line.

Race off, that is, as soon as I was able to unite all the innumerable ropes with which I had laced my tent flap tight the night before. This was a tedious job because my fingers were usually too blue and numb to knot my necktie and lace my shoes, much less fumble with ropes.

But eventually I always fought my way out of the tent, clutching my ice-cold aluminum mess kit and canteen cup in heavily gloved hands. Always, I kept my mind geared to the happy fact that if I hurried, I would have time enough for six cups of coffee. I had no intention that the sacrifice on the home front should be in vain!

Mess customs varied. But the messes I liked best were the al-fresco ones in certain Air Corps squadrons where, officers and enlisted men alike, "we" stood in the same chow line, first come, first served—cafeteria style.

Cold as it was, I always found this an exhilarating experience. After we were served, there were usually high tables at which we stood to eat. Occasionally a squadron did not even have such tables and we tried to find a building, not only to lean against, but to act as a wind-break while we ate.

It was never any problem as to whether we should eat at a polite, civilian pace and let uor vittals get cold or to wolf our food while it was hot. We wolfed. I have seen a canteen cup of boiling coffee turn stone cole in less than 5 minutes in such an al fresco dining hall.

For breakfast, which was always over by 8 a. m., we usually had coffee, although lease-lend works in mysterious ways its wonders to perform. I came across squadrons of American men who were living on British lease-lend vittals, with tea three times a day. Tea for breakfast is a bitter brew for an American soldier.

But usually, the American soldier had for breakfast all the coffee he could drink, and all the canned grapefruit juice he could drink, too. There was usually a hot cereal, with plenty of sugar and canned milk or cream. For sanitary reasons, there was never any fresh milk or cream.

Sometimes there were stewed raisins—"That's our iron" the boys would grin.

If the mess sergeant had been successful in dickering with the Arabs for eggs—and if there breathes an Arab with soul so dead he has not yet tried to sell eggs to American boys in forward areas, I have yet to hear of him—there would be dried eggs and canned bacon for breakfast.

Some messes had bread. In others, it was so rare that it was treasured and eaten as dessert after dinner and supper.

Messes without bread ate hard, unsweetened crackers or British biscuits for breakfast. There was always plenty of canned butter and jam or marmalade. And when this war is over, it will have been fought on the ubiquitous and well-liked peanut butter, of which the men put away prodigious quantities.

In any forward area, the food comes out of cans. Part of my education as a war correspondent consisted of adapting myself to a diet such as I had never eaten before, a diet without any fresh fruit except oranges and tangerines, without salads or greens or fresh vegetables except carrots and without fresh meat.

For dinner, served at 11:30 a. m. when ordinarilly I am thinking of breakfast, we ate spam, and more spam and then still additional spam!

The spam diet would be varied with Vienna sausage or canned stews of various sorts. There was, semioccasionally, canned steak. And there were canned vegetables, including canned sweet potatoes. But frankly, if I never see canned spinach again, I shall still be happy.

For dessert, there was usually canned fruit. Once, at AFQH we had a long, long run of canned peaches. In forward areas, it was apt to be canned pineapple. If anyone wants to know where all the canned pineapple has gone, I can tell him. We ate it in rings, chunks nad shredded, day in and day out.

For supper, at 5:30 p. m., there would often be a canned meat stew or highly spiced canned chili con carne. Often, they accompanied each other. Or, if they were served separately, they were teamed with canned spaghetti. Sometimes, canned potatoes would make their appearance, too.

Once in a while, the cooks would try their hand with a rice pudding. Occasionally at supper there would be hot chocolate instead of coffee or tea. The boys loved it.

From where we sit in America, these typical meals, served day after day, may seem no banquet. It was food such as I had never eaten in my life before. But, in all sincerity, let me say that it was delicious! At first I thought I would never be able to eat it. And then I found myself wolfing my food like any other yard bird, who never complains about the food as long as there is plenty of it—which there always is.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Women's Vote

Though their men may be gone to the wars, women may at least look forward to a siege of political lovemaking. From now on until November, 1944, they will hear bandied about such old standbys as "voice of American womanhood," "right thinking woman electorate," motherhood of the Nation," etc. For political leaders are even now talking about the power of the woman's ballot in the next election.

With so many men absent in the armed services, it is evident that the proportion of votes cast by women will be greater than ever before. This brings up again the question argued futilely for more than two decades, "Is there a woman's vote?"

One school of thought maintains there is not—that women are people and vote as individuals. The vestiges of another school (composed chiefly of elderly men) also insists there is not—that women vote about as their husbands, fathers, men advisers, etc., do. Still another school thinks that women react psychically to issues differently from men, and that there is in a vague way a "woman's vote." Politicians in order to play safe usually make clumsy efforts to appeal to a hypothetical woman's vote. At least they always announce with confidence that the women of the Nation are preponderantly behind their candidate.

Women a Mystery In Politics

Meanwhile the woman's vote remains a mystery in politics. Attempts to sample it have never led to any very definite conclusions. Just before the election of 1932, Samuel P. Hayes, jr., of Mount Holyoke College, assisted by the National League of Women Voters, sampled the views of women in 37 States. He applied rigid statistical controls to the results. His conclusions were that women were more liberal minded, more international minded and more socialist minded than men — but only slightly more. His general conclusion was the women reacted to candidates and issues generally about as men do.

One political characteristic somewhat more common to women than to men has been indifference to the ballot. But that is easily understood in view of their background and interests. It is not likely to be so marked in the next election. Women by the millions have left their homes in the last year to aid in the winning of the war. They have had their minds quickened by wider contacts and may be expected to go in greater numbers to the ballot boxes and have their say as to what goes on nationally.

Past Behavior Offers a Clew

Can any prediction be made as to what that say may be?

None other than one of the "if" and "or" variety. But judging from the past, and speaking from intuition (a way of speaking scorned by Mr. Gallup, but respected by most women) this column ventures to offer the following suggestions to political leaders who are puzzling themselves over the large feminine electorate of 1944.

The candidate, like the play, is the thing. Women generally are personal minded. What is more, they have not had the tradition of party training and loyalty so long as men. They are much less likely than men to give allegiance to a "safe" colorless candidate who bears the party's trade-mark. On the other hand, they are smart enough to mistrust flashy "oomph." Their past record shows that long before they had the vote they had a way of thinking and feeling about the personalities of men in public life. They stirred up much of the row about Rachel, Andrew Jackson's wife; they criticized the rugged personal foibles of President Grant; they loudly approved President Hayes and particularly his wife for banning liquor at the White House; they eulogized President McKinley for his devotion to his invalid wife; they are credited wtih having turned the tide for Woodrow Wilson, "apostle of peace," in 1916, also with having helped to defeat Al Smith in 1928.

Candidate's Wife Enters the Picture

Another point to consider in relation to the woman's vote is the candidate's wife. She can be a passive help, that is the nonoffending homebody, or she can be an active help in the club woman, civic leader style. She cannot of all things afford to be dowdy or in any way "cheap." She cannot be "stuck up" nor yet too much like an old shoe. She cannot be behind the times nor too far ahead of them. But with all these things she must also be—herself, or depend upon it, the women will find her out.

As to issues, this column ventures a guess that political leaders will find the tendency discovered by Mr. Hayes in his survey of 1932 even more evident among women of 1944. At present they seem to be thinking more than men of the international problems ahead and to be also much concerned with the social needs that confront this country. One thing can be depended upon—the woman's vote will be found to be a much more intelligent vote than men leaders realize. Aside from the fact that more girls than boys are graduated from high school, women more than men continue their education in adult life through their church societies, their parent - teacher groups and their study clubs.

Also here is another point for politicians to remember—a woman may be fooled by a man making love to her, but that is largely because she wants to be fooled. It will be no easy thing to fool her when paying political courtship for her vote.

Synthetics Need Gentle Treatment

Silks and synthetics will not hold up under the scrubbing and soaking inflicted on cottons and other hardy materials. Here are some hints for their treatment:

Never soak silks and synthetics. Don't rub, twist or wring garments made of these materials. They just can't take it, according to Westinghouse home economists. Instead, wash gently in mild, lukewarm suds, and if washing by hand squeeze suds through garments. Rinse quickly at least twice to get every bit of soap out. Knead gently to remove excess water. Then hurry onto the line or roll in a bath towel.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

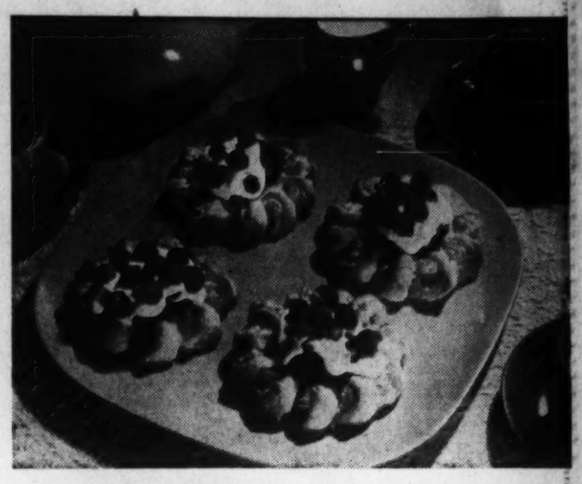
Martha Ellyn

Do you ponder how you can vary your dessert in these days of shortages of sugar, fats, chocolate and a number of other foods that you normally use in making a dessert?

How about some tea rings? They may sound like party fare to you but they are nourishing and delicious. They require little shortening and but one tablespoon honey or light corn sirup for sweetening. Here's the way you make them:

TEA RINGS

Sift 2 cups sifted enriched flour and 1 teaspoon salt together. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Beat 1 whole egg and 1 egg yolk, reserving white for tops. Add about ½ cup milk and 1 tablespoon honey or light corn sirup to the beaten eggs and add all to the flour mixture. Stir only enough to make dough hold together. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead a half minute. Roll out into a rectangle 8 inches wide and ⅛-inch thick. Cut in half lengthwise. Spread each portion with grated cheese and roll jelly-roll fashion, sealing edges. Cut into 8-inch pieces and form into rings on greased baking sheet. Pinch ends together. With scissors cut through rings almost to center, in slices about 1 inch thick. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Brush rings with egg white. Bake in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Fill center with a spoonful of applesauce or berries. Yield: about 6 individual rings.



It is putting the cart before the horse to plan the dessert first. But with a delicious, nutritious dessert like the tea rings, there won't need to be another stellar dish on the menu, just good homespun food.

We are all paying attention to the points used for our meat dishes. Lamb Shanks take but 4 points per pound and the AA grade ceiling price is 24 cents. They make an appealing dish when curried and served with rice. Here is a recipe for making this dish and a menu in which it will fit:

Dinner Menu

Curried Lamb Shanke With Rice
Carrots Tossed Green Salad
Whole Wheat Bread Butter
Tea Rings Tea

If you want to serve four persons buy 4 lamb shanks. Get out your box of curry and other items given in the following recipe and go to work:

CURRIED LAMB SHANKS WITH RICE

Roll 4 lamb shanks in 2 tablespoons flour and brown slowly in 2 tablespoons fat for 10 to 15 minutes. Add 3 cups water, 2 teaspoons salt, a dash of pepper and simmer slowly for 1½ hours. When tender, add ½ teaspoon curry powder and thicken gravy with 1½ tablespoons flour mixed with 1/3 cup cold water. Serve on a bed of fluffy rice with curry sauce for gravy.

MRS. VICTORIA OCAMPO

Idealism of Mr. Wallace Praised By Visiting Argentine Editor

Mrs. Victoria Ocampo, Editor of Magazine Sur, Here on Nation-wide Lecture Tour

By Peggy Preston

"Your Mr. Wallace made a great impression in Argentina . . . we need to hear more of his brand of idealism."

Vital, dramatic-looking Victoria Ocampo, editor of the strongly pro-democratic Sur, outstanding literary magazine of her native Argentina, is intensely interested in the cause of Inter-American relations. She spoke thus with emphasis yesterday here in Washington, where she is stopping first in her Nation-wide lecture tour at the invitation of the Guggenheim Foundation.

As editor of a publication that is progressive, courageous and anti-Fascist, Mrs. Ocampo has long been an exponent of the democratic dream. In her essays and editorials are reflected the belief that common ideals, not race, creed or color, bind peoples together.

In the opinion of the darkly vivid Argentinian the people of Latin America are hungry for more words of promise of a better world to come. "We understand such things as your Vice President spoke of in his recent visit with us," she went on. "We are not afraid to voice idealism, for only by the repeated expression of such beliefs can we hope to sow the seeds for a truly social and economic freedom, when the war is past."

There are many things that will hold the interest of Mrs. Ocampo during her stay in this country. She is eager to visit the war plants and factories and to take note of the revolutionary role being played by women in industry; she wishes to question students and young people on their attitude toward postwar planning and above all she wants to ascertain how the man in the street is reacting to the program for more complete understanding between the two Americas.

Motion Pictures A Great Influence

According to her observations in Argentina the young people are forming their ideas on the United States on what they see in the motion pictures. "The films are exerting a great influence on the man in the street," says Mrs. Ocampo, who admits that she herself is an ardent moviegoer. "Perhaps you do not realize it, but the Argentinian masses form their ideas of your people entirely from what they see on the screen."

A woman of many cultures, Victoria Ocampo has long been recognized as one of her country's outstanding women. Born of a wealthy and distinguished family she has traveled widely and led an exciting and eventful life. She speaks many languages fluently and converses in English with complete ease. In the fields of art, music and literature she has made considerable contributions, but writing has been her main interest for the past several years.

In the interests of her magazine she interviewed Mussolini in 1934.

"I found him intelligent, but wrong, utterly wrong, in his philosophy of government," she explained and wrote a prophetic article in her magazine to the effect that "Italy was standing on the toe of its boot."

Has Many Friends In Washington

The forthright Mrs. Ocampo has many friends in Washington, one of the dearest being Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, wife of the former United States Ambassador to Argentina. She has many engagements to occupy her stay here, but is eager to see as much of the city itself as possible. The art galleries, the museums, the libraries, all fall within her realm of interests.

This is not the first time an Ocampo has visited Washington. In 1817 her great-great-grandfather came here on a special mission in the interests of Argentine independence. He conferred with President Monroe and arranged for the purchase of his country's first battleships in Baltimore.

Flowers to Be Shown on Benefit Tour

Prizes will be awarded for the most attractive flower arrangement in the embassies and legations and private homes which will be opened today for a tour for the benefit of the Washington Home for the Incurables.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Justice Roberts; Mrs. Chase Donaldson, Mrs. Clifford Mallory, Mrs. Perley Nutting, Mrs. Lomax Tayloe and Mrs. J. W. Turrentine will be judges.

At the Egyptian Legation flower exhibits will be shown by Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Walton Butterworth, Miss Barbara Mallory, Mrs. Russell Robb and the Takoma Horticultural Club.

Mme. Le Gallais, wife of the Luxembourg Minister, will enter her flower arrangements at her legation, as will Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Swedish Minister, and the Forest Hills Garden Club.

Flowers will be exhibited at the Turkish Embassy by Mrs. Curtis Munson, Mrs. William Burden, Miss Nan Hollerith and Mrs. John Vincent.

Tea will be served at the Lindens, home of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, and there will also be an exhibit and sale of articles made by the patients at the home.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will be among those taking their turn at the tea table this afternoon, and also serving will be Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. William B. Poland and Mrs. William R. Clayton.

Tickets may be purchased at the doors of all houses included on the tour.

Teschners Visit Mrs. Frigge Here

Maj. and Mrs. Charles G. Teschner, who are now making their home in Holyoke, Mass., where Major Teschner is on duty, arrived in Washington yesterday for a brief visit with Mrs. Teschner's mother, Mrs. Edward H. Frigge, at the latter's home at 3100 Connecticut Avenue.

Major Teschner, who is in the United States Army Air Corps, has recently returned from a tour of duty in the South Pacific, Wake Island and Honolulu.

Luncheon Today To Mark First WAAC Anniversary

Marking the first anniversary of the WAACS, officers of the WAAC Recruiting Center here will entertain at a luncheon today in the Embassy Room of the Hotel Statler.

Among the 15 persons who will be present are Third Officer Helen Cooper, Third Officer Barbara Smith, Third Officer Rita Eney, and Third Officer Elizabeth Berge, all of the WAACS; Lieut. (j. g.) Leila Stevens of the WAVES, Ensign Dorothy Whitly of the SPARS, First Lieut. Kathleen Hogan of the Marines.

Also invited to be present are First Officer Edith Biddle of the Women's Royal Naval Service, Capt. Hilda M. Gram, Commanding Officer of the Canadian Women's Army Corps; Squadron Officer Kay Collins of the Women's Auxiliary Air Forces, and Senior Commander Pamela Hammick of the Auxiliary Territorial Service.

Guests of Honor

Comdr. Fernando Romero, Assistant Naval Attache of the Peruvian Embassy, and Senora de Romero, entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Dr. Fernando Ortiz and Senora de Ortiz of Havana.

Dr. Ortiz is in this country at the invitation of the Department of State.

Mr., Mrs. R. Howard Returning Soon From Honeymoon

Chief Gunner's Mate Ralph A. Howard, U. S. N., and his bride, the former Miss Veronica Gertrude Gillin, will return to Washington within a few days, after a wedding trip to New York.

Their marriage took place here on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Anthony's Church. Only members of the immediate families and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony at which the Rev. John J. Dressel officiated.

Miss Katherine A. Klein was the bride's only attendant, and Richard A. Gillin, brother of the bride, was best man.

Mrs. Howard is a graduate of St. Cecilia's Academy and Columbus University.

Purely Personal

Miguel E. Pincell, Commercial Attache of the Uruguayan Embassy, left last night for New York, where he will be at the Waldorf-Astoria until next week.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty is leaving today for her summer place, "Little Cedars," at Westport, Conn. She has recently returned from three weeks in the South.

Miss Eileen Elizabeth Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson of Takoma Park, Md., whose wedding to Midshipman Robert Bird will take place next month, was honored at a surprise miscellaneous shower last night, given by Mrs. Edwin R. Brown at her home on Takoma Avenue. Earlier in the week the bride-to-be was tendered a crystal shower at the Kenesaw by her coworkers in the British Air Commission

Miss Helen Rosen of 726 Quebec Place, Washington, is visiting at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York City this week.

Mrs. Lester Lansburgh, who has come from California for a visit in the East, is spending some time at the Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Heller, who have been residing at the Brighton Apartment, returned yesterday to their home in St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. Thomas Quinn Ashburn, widow of Major General Ashburn, has returned to Washington and has taken an apartment at the Broadmoor.

Mrs. Albert Steinem is spending this week in New York.

Capital Officialdom at Fete for President Benes

Czecho-Slokav Embassy Scene of Outstanding Reception of Season

Standing near the portrait of the famed Czech leader, Jan Masaryk, President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia greeted almost 500 of Washington's officialdom last evening at the reception given in his honor at the Embassy by the Czecho-Slovakian Ambassador and Mme. Hurban.

Guests from all the branches of government, the chiefs of diplomatic missions of the United Nations, and a variety of others stopped to say a word to the visiting President of the No. 1 country on Hitler's conquest parade. Almost everyone had a congratulatory word to say to the Czech envoy who has recently taken on the title of Ambassador.

The trio received in the library at the top of the steps, which was simply decorated with white peonies. Mme. Hurban wore a gown of eggshell chiffon, trimmed in gold and silver Slovak embroidery. Her corsage was of gold orchids and lilies of the valley. Before the swarms of official cars started to arrive, a group of 46 had been invited in to dine at the Embassy.

Notables There In Full Force

From 10 o'clock on, the reception guests swarmed in, formally attired and clutching their invitations in their hands to identify themselves with the checker at the door. Members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court were seen in the throng that filled the library and drawing room. Guests found their way to the long table in the dining room, which was centered with a bouquet of pink peonies and was laden with small sandwiches and canapes.

Everything was kept on a simple scale, with the fish course being cut from the dinner menu at the last moment and domestic wines being served at the ungarnished banquet. Drinks were dispensed from a bar in the living room and the members of the embassy staff were on hand to see that everyone had what he wanted.

A number of Britishers were in the gathering and gold-decorated service uniforms could be seen on every side. Only a few from the residential circle were on hand for the occasion—those who have been very active in Czecho-Slovakian war relief. The British Consul General, Capt. John W. Taylor, and Mrs. Taylor came from Baltimore to attend the fete, and among those from New York were Hamilton Fish Armstrong and John Crane, brother of the late Richard Crane, the first United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia.

Dinner at Embassy This Evening

The crowded schedule of President Benes will taper off this weekend, with today being devoted to conferences. This evening there will be a small dinner in his honor at the embassy. Tomorrow is his day of rest, and on Monday he will again resume conferences and will be honored at a lunch at the embassy.

He will be the guest speaker at the National Press Club luncheon on Tuesday.

Margaret Royall To Be Married In Goldsboro, N. C.

Col. Kenneth Claiborne Royall, U. S. A., and Mrs. Royall of Washington and Goldsboro, N. C., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Best Royall, to James Evans Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Wilborn Davis of Goldsboro. The wedding will take place next month in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Goldsboro.

Miss Royall attended St. Mary's School in Raleigh, N. C., and Gunston Hall School in Washington. She was graduated from Sweet Briar College in 1940 and received her master's degree from Teachers College, Columbia University, in 1941. She is now on the faculty of Lincoln School in New York.

Mr. Davis attended Virginia Episcopal High School in Lynchburg, Va., and was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1940. He is completing a medical course at the University of Pennsylvania as a naval reservist and will enter the Service July 1.

Mrs. Jeannette Lowe, director of the USO Servicemen's Lounge at Union Station, has been with the organization since its opening on May 10, 1942. Tomorrow afternoon, directors, volunteer receptionists and noted guests will be on hand with servicemen and women to selebrate the first birthday anniversary of the lounge, which has accommodated nearly a million men during the past year

Looking over his baggage, which is one of thousands of pieces checked free each day at the USO Servicemen's Lounge at Union Station is Sergt. Union Station's U. S. O. Lounge Celebrates First Anniversary Today

's Impressive Cross-Section of Nation's Heart

By Martha Rhyne

Washington's Union Station as often been called the "cross-oads of the world." But step off the teeming concourse into the USO Lounge for troops in transit, which will tomorrow celebrate its first birthday anniversary, and you will find the cross-section of the Nation's heart. There approximately 4000 service men and women move in and out each day.

Unsung heroines of the war will include Mrs. Jeannette Lowe, director of the lounge, and her staff of four professional workers and nearly 400 volunteers. Jeanette Lowe, a native of Ohio, has been a pioneer in social service ever since her graduation from Vassar.

Of the 100 troops-in-transit lounges over the Nation, Mrs. Lowe feels that the one at Union Station had the most dignified start, since the President himself turned over the imposing presidential reception halls at the station to the USO and the Travelers' Aid for servicemen's use. Nearly a million men have moved through those halls during the past year—boys uneasy in the first big city they have ever visited, boys anxious to see their Nation's Capital, boys bewildered with their new life in uniform.

Director Praises Her Assistants

"My happiest moments," Mrs. Lowe said, "are when I realize that they've enjoyed the place. Letters, words to other men, and countless recognitions have attested to their appreciation. Last week a company of paratroopers, in an opening celebration at a new field in North Carolina, dedicated their sixth jump to 'our second mother, the USO Lounge in Union Station.'"

Mrs. Lowe praised the women who work at the lounge. Especially she pointed out Government girls, who come in after eight hours in an office to do several hours' work in the lounge's 24-hour schedule. "Their patriotism is real," she said. "Some of them come in here at 7 o'clock on Sunday morning after a 48-hour week."

Radios, writing tables, a telephone music system, a player phonograph, lounge chairs, ping-pong tables and gifts of books, playing cards and games for the long hours on the train are part of the many things the lounge offers. The men use 40,000 sheets of paper and envelopes a month and the number of postcards soar into astronomical figures. A free checkroom is maintained for baggage. The women at the desks map sightseeing tours and act as liaison officers, too. When boys are sent to Washington to be stationed, they are told to report to the lounge. There the receptionist notifies their post and arranges transportation. They keep a resources file where a boy can find out where he can rent a camera or a bicycle, go picnicking, buy clothing, go skating and, as one boy found out, they even know where one can get an antique doll repaired.

All Types of Questions Asked

Questions confronting the workers include, "How long does it take to get married in North Carolina when you have the license and the girl?" For a rather nervous bridegroom-to-be. Mrs. Katherine G. Parsons, staff member, purchased a license and a gardenia corsage. Wilted corsage, bride and all, the boy returned several days later to thank her—as they always do.

The organization, which obtains its volunteers from the Office of Civilian Defense and from Mrs. Mason Gulick's contingent of Army, Navy, Marine and congressional wives, is a clearing house for messages. If John Doe, in from Camp Blank in Florida on a short leave here wants to meet his brother, Joe, stationed in Washington, the receptionist does all in her power to get the two boys together. One of the ladies at the desk told of keeping a baby for a young couple who wanted to go out to the movies and had no one with whom to leave the child. Besides mothering infants, they also have been left a family of doves to watch after. Thursday, a fellow left his wild duck at the desk with bread for feeding periods.

Thousands of Men In Uniform Call There Each Day

'A Heartbreak Each Hour'

It's not all small services, either. There's a heartbreak an hour, for some boys come in with serious difficulties. There was a death in the family of a boy who had never been in a city before. He was instructed how to cash his check and was given every necessary attention. A family of 10 once arrived to attend the funeral of their son who had died in a nearby camp. They only knew his name and his camp—the receptionists found hotel accommodations for the family, contacted the War Department about funeral arrangements and transportation to the services. Another boy was here on furlough and during that time his mother died. His camp contacted the lounge, an emergency extension of leave was granted, and hourly broadcasts over local radio stations found the boy in record time.

A log is kept so that each shift of workers will know what is being done—that log will certainly record some of the most touching stories to pass human lips during World War II. Though the boys may soon forget marching feet and heavy packs, no armistice will erase their memory of kindnesses in their behalf.

Mr., Mrs. Symon Give Supper Party

It was a dual celebration for Mr. and Mrs. A. C. B. Symon Thursday when they asked a few friends in for an informal buffet supper at their apartment at the Dorchester House.

Mr. Symon was giving his wife a "Happy Birthday" party and Mrs. Symon was giving her husband a "Happy Birthday" party. Among those helping them to celebrate the day were K. C. Mahindra, Miss May Fawcett, Miss Emma Leubbing, Lieut. Col. Rajah Kumar Rajendrasinhji, Tom Beesley, Kish Narogi, Howard Swiggett and George Comfort.

Major Exnicios Here on Leave

Recently arrived in Washington on leave is Maj. Marshall Orme Exnicios, U. S. A. A. F. He received his wings at Fort Demming, N. Mex., and is here awaiting orders for overseas duty.

On Monday he went down to Middleburg to visit his daughter, Miss Joan Exnicios, a student at Foxcroft School, and to see her ride in the Foxcroft Horse Show. Before entering the Army a year ago, Major Exnicios was a frequent participant in the various hunts in Middleburg and was one of the organizers of the Potomac Hunt in Maryland.

Self-Taught Cuban Artist Has Good-Neighbor Mission

Margareta de Mena Is in Capital For Visit; Plans Exhibit Here

By Patricia Grady

"It is my mission in life."

In these words Senorita Margareta de Mena describes her desire to cement the Good Neighbor policy through the medium of beauty, color, emotion. This young Cuban artist, who is in the Capital as the house guest of Mme. Haidar Bey, has just come from a year of painting at the University of New Mexico, where she held a scholarship from the Institute of International Education.

Impressed by her first visit to this country, Senorita de Mena's reactions are all in terms of her art. It is her all-consuming devotion, the only thing she cares to talk about. Before long, Washington will have an opportunity to see the impressionistic, bright-hued, diffused paintings of this self-taught artist. She is laying plans for an exhibit under the auspices of the Cuban Embassy.

Mobile hands implement her halting English as she explains the place of beauty in creating understanding among people of diversified cultures. She has fought hard for her own art. As the daughter of a conservative Cuban family, her life in Santiago de Cuba was rigidly patterned—learning the social graces, attending the proper convents, betrothal to a suitable man.

Exhibits In Cuba

But when she became of age, Senorita de Mena bid farewell to her family, her background and her fiance, started off for Havana to carve out for herself an artistic career. She entered a contest for postgraduate students—never having taken an art course—with her first painting and was instantly recognized as an artist of training and ability.

The ability was there and the senorita supplied her own training. For five years she experimented, painted, studied in her own way while eking out a meager livelihood with small commercial jobs. Slowly her fame grew and in 1938 and 1940 exhibitions of her works were held at the Havan Lycuem, and other Cuban art centers. In the fall of last year, she came to this country, where she found her professors in New Mexico asked that she teach them.

Paints To Music

Temperamentally just what an artist is expected to be, Senorita de Mena gains her inspiration from music. Without it she cannot paint. Her strokes, which are made with a palette knife, are done in special tempo. "It is singing to my ears," she says as she demonstrates in the air her criss-cross painting technique.

'The More the Merrier,' A Capital Comedy, Earle

Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn, Joel McCrea Magnify Humor of Local Housing Shortage; Brief Stage Revue Is Colorfully Mounted

"THE MORE THE MERRIER." Columbia picturization of a story by Robert Russell and Frank Foss, adapted to the screen by the authors and Richard Flournoy and Lewis R. Foster, costarring Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn and Joel McCrea, with Richard Gaines, Bruce Bennett, Frank Sully, Clyde Fillmore, Stanley Clements and Don Douglas. Produced and directed by George Stevens. At the Earle Theater.

IT MUST BE FUN to live in Washington! On the strength of the disarming disclosures made in "The More the Merrier," that is.

As every informed theatergoer must know by now, this new Columbia comedy, which yesterday made its first appearance on the local screen at the Earle Theater, is predicated upon the acuteness of the housing situation in the National Capital, clogged as it is with bewildered warworkers with nowhere to repose their tired heads and weary bodies, barring an occasional park bench. In its gay contemplation of this characteristically cockeyed congestion, the picture runs the gamut, in a manner of speaking, from slapstick to sentiment and the riotously ridiculous to the restrainedly romantic. It has no political or satirical axes to grind and dedicates itself devotedly to the proposition that propinquity is hard on the heart.

Connie Milligan, an office girl engaged to a governmental stuffed shirt, surrendered to her patriotic impulses and rented half of her apartment to a Mr. Benjamin Dingle, a "well-to-do millionaire," with a great and compassionate heart. Mr. Dingle, in a burst of kindly solicitude, rented half of his half to the "honest and clean-cut" young fellow who described himself as a West Coast mechanic in a baby carriage factory, in Washington on a special assignment—which seems to consist of lugging an enormous airplane propeller through the city streets in search of a bed.

By much the same sort of paternal maneuvering as characterized his similar role in "The Devil and Miss Jones," Charles Coburn, as the discerning Mr. Dingle, so manipulates events and the romantic inclinations of his cellmates as to bring huge discomfiture to the overstuffed Mr. Pendergast and a presumable future of ecstatic bliss to Miss Milligan and Sergt. Joe Carter, whose perambulators turn out to be designed to carry some very important "babies" to Tokyo.

In revealing so much of the comic framework of the story, no harm is done it, for the rare and admirable reason that the charm of the deft manner of its writing and the skill with which it is played by Jean Arthur, Mr. Coburn and Joel McCrea. They are not, unfortunately, at all times equipped with lines and situations that sparkle and explode with humor, but even to the play's duller intervals they bring an expertness in timing and a restraint that make everything they say and do seem funnier than it is. Perhaps to a greater degree than in any of her earlier assignments, Miss Arthur here clinches her claim to a high place among the foremost of the screen's comediennes. Miss Milligan is an exceedingly quaint and querulous young woman in Miss Arthur's hands. More repressed than is his wont, McCrea is proportionately more effective as the reticent young fellow who makes Richard Gaines' Mr. Pendergast seem a very vacuous nonentity. The veteran Charles Coburn, not usually listed among the great farceurs, proves himself to be one by the adroitness with which he endows Mr. Dingle with an audacious sense of humor. These three largely relieve Robert Russell, Frank Foss, Richard Flournoy and Lewis R. Foster, authors of the story and script, of the charge of having pressed too hard for some of their laughs. The remainder of the cast are the merest "stooges" for the stars.

Movement and Color on Stage

Not pretentious, but tasteful and engaging is the stage bill Managing Director Harry Anger has devised for the Earle's new week. The Roxyettes' opening number, "Chartreuse and Blue" is a shimmeringly beautiful creation that backgrounds a precision dance of flawless execution and paves the way perfectly for Eunice Healy's typically finished solo appearance in two tap routines that yesterday's first audience found all too short.

With equally striking effect, the Roxyettes introduce Art and Bob Coleman in a Western setting that enables them to disguise their singing and whistling athleticism in satin cowboy togs. This polished team is unique among stage gymnasts and never fails of a hit. To conclude the proceedings, the Roxyettes revive their tricky "walking ball" specialty to the high glee of the customers and the tune of "By the Light of the Silvery Moon."

Withal these genial goings-on, the supplementary features of the bill are not to be lightly brushed off. "Weapons for Victory," with Lowell Thomas narrating, is the story of lend-lease and its weight in the war, and the reel of "Unusual Occupations," in natural color, visualizes an interesting variety of strange and useful hobbies. The newsreel and Jo Lombardi's orchestral contributions are the remaining auxiliaries of a feature that Washington will hail as Grade-A diversion, if not a living likeness.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

An Angelic Mr. Benny!

Hollywood, May 14 (INS).—Can't you just see Jack Benny as a good-goodie angel wrestling with temptation? Well, that's the role Jack will play in "The Horn Blows at Midnight," a comedy fantasy by Sam Hellman, based on a story by Jacques Thery. Jack's radio vacation comes up in June and he'll spend the last part of it flapping his wings and twanging his harp on the Warner lot where he last made "George Washington Slept Here." First, however, he'll go on a camp tour.

JACK BENNY

After doing his bit for Uncle Sam he'll get together with Producer Mark Hellinger and Director Raoul Walsh to make the amusing, celestial yarn which sounds like a male version of "I Married an Angel."

If the many letters I receive from fans is any criterion, then you know that old-time actors like Monte Blue are in high favor. Monte played a role of a trainer in a movie I saw. I've forgotten the name of the picture, but we received dozens of letters asking why Monte Blue was not given better parts. I haven't looked into Jack Warner's mail but I'll bet he got some of the same letters for now he has given Monte a good part in "Animal Kingdom."

Very nice that this new job comes just when he is celebrating his thirty-third year in motion pictures. Now don't ask me how long I've been writing a column for I'm the kind of gal who ain't tellin' her real age.

"Diamond Lil" is to have a daughter. Whether Ann Corio has the legal right to give the rowdy Lil maternity I don't know. But Ann, who is a great admirer of Mae West, has a play she is calling "Diamond Lil's Daughter," and she plans first to take it on the road and then make it into a movie at Monogram. That is, unless Mae West has the right to refuse to let Diamond Lil go on into the next generation. Ann is brunette, slim and the opposite of Miss West, who is blonde, blue-eyed and plumpish.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Dona Drake and Tom Neal had that look in their eyes when they dined at Ella Campbell's the other eve; Judy Garland has rented Mary Martin's Brentwood home; Richard Quine, who weds Susan Peters soon, holding hands with her at Ciro's.

Claire Trevor lunching at the Brown Derby with Max Gordon. Maybe discussing a stage play for Claire; red roses on the "heavenly body" set sent to Hedy Lamarr by John Loder; Betty Grable is back on the Twentieth lot to resume the dance routines interrupted by her illness.

Kay Whitehead and Dick English, whose marriage is not too far distant, doing a rhumba at the Mocambo; Betty Hutton's blonde hair is now a chestnut brown; Virginia Herrick, checkroom girl, who looks like Vivien Leigh, is being tested at Twentieth.

Had Room to Rent—and in Washington!

JEAN ARTHUR

in the stellar feminine role in Columbia's "The More the Merrier," a comedy of the housing shortage in the National Capital, now enlivening the screen at the Earle Theater, with Joel McCrea and Charles Coburn as the male stars. Connie Milligan rented half of her apartment and that half rented half of its half. You may go on from there!

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

CLIMATE: Phil Reed, former chairman of the board of General Electric, now is W. Averell Harriman's assistant in London. Before that, he held a high post with the War Production Board . . . He recently was offered the job of chairman of the North African Economic Board, but declined it because he thought the climate in North Africa would impair his health. This was reported to John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, upon his return from Africa. "I guess," said McCloy, "we'll have to invade the Riviera, to suit Phil Reed's health."

HAROLD ICKES

REFERENCES: Gertrude Macy filed an application in a Government matter and listed three references. "The use of names which are too prominent, as references, is frowned upon," Miss Macy was cautioned. "It indicates that you may be seeking special attention. For instance, the first name—Katharine Cornell." . . . "The application says I need a reference from my employer," explained Miss Macy—"and I've been working for Miss Cornell for many years." . . . "And the second name—Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy?" Miss Macy was asked. . . . "That's a reference from a neighbor," she replied. "I live next door to Mrs. Forrestal." . . . "But why the third name—Harry Hopkins?" she was asked . . . "That's a reference from a relative," Miss Macy answered. "He's my brother-in-law."

ECONOMICS: Jimmy Byrnes, head of the Bureau of Economic Stabilization, now works mornings at his victory garden in Washington. It's on an empty lot at Sheridan Circle, owned by Frank Hogan, his foster-brother . . . Byrnes, boss of the Nation's economic program, is growing beans, radishes and tomatoes on this plot of land—land which is assessed at $40,000.

THRILL: Johnny Longden, the jockey who won his first Kentucky Derby on Count Fleet, lunched at the Gamecock, where he was asked: "Which gave you a bigger thrill—winning the Derby or the birth of your new baby last week?" . . . "Well," Longden replied, "I didn't hand out any cigars when I won the Derby."

PREPARATION: In Secretary Ickes' "Autobiography of a Curmudgeon," the author paid glowing tribute to the State Department, to Cordell Hull's reciprocal trade treaties, and praised the farsightedness of this policy . . . When some of Ickes' friends quoted this chapter to him, and asked how come, the Secretary of the Interior said: "I'm writing another book. I thought I'd sweeten 'em for the kill."

CHATTER: Thomas A. Morgan, president of the Sperry Corp., will receive a doctor of science degree from Duke University this month . . . Pvt. Robert Nathan, recent head of the WPB's Planning Division, startled the officers at Camp Lee by scoring an I. Q. of 159 out of a possible 162 . . . A. K. Aldinger, head of the PSAL and for more than 25 years athletic director of the city's schools, will retire this week . . . Commander Vincent Astor will be promoted shortly . . . The late Dr. Dunaif of Brooklyn left his entire estate—$75,000—to a fund for the advancement of Negro art and culture. Paul Robeson and Marian Anderson will administer it.

SPEECH: Some marines at Henderson Field in Guadalcanal were asked by some of the natives to teach them a few words of English. The marines obliged, and began by teaching them three words of greeting to be spoken when they extended a welcoming hand . . . That's why, in the jungles of the Solomons, it no longer is a rare experience to meet a wild-looking native, who breaks into a smile, extends his hand, and utters the three memorized words of greeting: "Vote for Willkie."

Ida Lupino, star of "The Hard Way," has closed her Mandeville Canyon home and taken an apartment in Hollywood for the duration.

HEDDA HOPPER

Succor for Famished

Hollywood, Calif., May 14.—Eddie Cantor's agreed to raise $500,000 to take 500 undernourished children from various parts of Europe and send them to Palestine. He's already got $100,000 of it and pushes on to New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston to raise the rest . . . Republic, out of 37 tests to find a new Western star, has narrowed it down to four, all over 6 feet—Bill Kellon, Eddie Dew, Dinty Moore and Bob Sparr, the latter a railroad man. One of them will be chosen for the new star; others get jobs in "The Masked Marvel," which Lew Gray produces. I asked if they were all in 4-F. Reply was, "They'd have to be to be signed on a long-term contract."

EDDIE CANTOR

He, Hum!

I'm beginning to tire of the goings-on of the cover girls, but I think this is the topper. Smokey Anderson was invited out to dine by some friends. Friends were friends of Errol Flynn, who joined them. That didn't meet with the approval of Harry Cohn, who threatened to send her back to New York pronto. When dined by the Cary Grants, they got nothing but praise . . . June Vincent, pretty New York miss who had a deal with Charlie Feldman, signed a contract with Universal. She has a different personality and if she can act should go far.

Kind Hearted—But

When Henry Koster moves from Universal he may take the story of "100 Women and a Man" with him, although Universal gave him 40 weeks in which to prepare it; also Writer Miles Connolly. Koster's a fine director, but a little on the slow side. He's brought more refugees into pictures than any single man. They're good, but every time he hires one it puts an American out of work . . . Dorothy Lamour had a not from a sailor asking for some leg art for pin-up purposes and wrote, "Please include the pins."—Lamour and Betty Hutton aren't singing their duets like angels in that angel picture . . . Director Nick Grinde, in his off moments, built 50 defense houses, sold them all. Has started another unit in Inglewood. His former fiancee, Marie Wilson, is his vice president . . . Veronica Lake goes a fishing with Wally Berry and Carole Ann at Wally's place in Jacksons Hole, Wyo. What a combination!

Got There First

Sol Lesser, now that his Stage Door Canteen picture is a tie, will do one about Hollywood canteen, which has Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer upset. They hoped to do one about that popular place. Although, why they should, I don't know. They've been the least cooperative studio in town when we needed entertainers . . . Matty Fox, after doing such a swell job for the WPB in Washington, resigned and reports here to his draft board in 10 days, but definitely won't report back to Universal studio until war's ended . . . Paramount previewed for all employes who worked on "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The entire cast of the picture there except Ingrid Bergman, who was ill, and Akim Tamiroff. David Selznick came to put his okay on Ingrid, which he did in no uncertain terms.

Coast Takes a Bow

Mrs. Frank Case of New York's Algonquin, visiting me. She should be signed by our chamber of commerce. The climate, birds, bees, and flowers which we take for granted are to her something to shout about. We don't realize what it means to an Easterner, after a particularly hard winter, to be able to get a perfect tan in 48 hours. We dined at Pickfair, on the eighteenth wedding anniversary of the Sonny Chaliffs. Sonny in rare form, describing their wedding day at Pickfair. A great shame he didn't go in for acting. There, too, were the Capt. Bud Ernsts. We saw Mary's adopted baby, which Buddy calls their cover girl. Buddy with a new promotion hadn't time to add gold braid to his uniforms.

The Fellow Is Tops

Kay Kyser and his band too busy playing for the soldiers to take theater and night club engagements. So Kay, in order to give his boys extra dough, gave his services free for a sequence in Metro's musical "Private Miss Jones." . . . Phil Spitalny's All-Girl Band will have a second go at movies after they finish at New York's Capitol for $50,000 . . . Morton Downey, raving over "Desert Victory." Said he, "Montgomery did a great job at El Alamein. Sam Goldwyn couldn't have done it better" . . . Twentieth's young hopeful, Nick Conti, finds Bonita Granville's company most acceptable . . . Mary Nash says you can't blame the censor; he's got to draw the line somewhere.

Ramblings

Ruth Markham widow of Dean, has been signed to a Twentieth Century contract and plays a "Pin-up girl" in that picture . . . George Holmes entered the Army four months ago, has a medical discharge, and is already back playing in "The Life of Roger Touhy" . . . Jimmy Ellison plays the reporter in "Col. Effingham's Raid" . . . Randy Scott spending much time at Metro-Goldwyn. Looks like a contract . . . All is not as friendly as of yore between Joe Pasternak and Gregory Ratoff.

Can This Be Washington?

Everywhere you turn, people are saying this or that about Washington. To some it is a bedlam of theories—to others a merry social whirl. Many term it plain crazy.

But if you get 'round in the Nation's Capital you can't help noticing the jostling, pushing crowds in theaters, restaurants, stores, waiters independently telling customers what they long have felt . . . taxicab drivers hoisting their "off duty" signs during the rush hours . . .

Genevieve Reynolds

long queues of people standing on street corners waving frantically for cabs already jammed with passengers . . . groups of lonely girls dining together . . . sailors, soldiers, marines saluting superior officers five or six times while walking one block . . . tame squirrels cavorting across the grass in LaFayette Park . . . bold, saucy sparrows twittering and hopping from cornice to cornice of the U. S. Treasury Building . . . a prim-looking old lady who sits near the fountain in the park near Dupont Circle, calmly smoking a cigarette (without removing her immaculate white gloves).

Then there is the city itself—sprawling, beautiful with the Capitol as the focal point; parks, flowers, trees and slums . . . lacy curtains and a red geranium brightening the windows of the crowded, tenement houses . . . stately embassies, imposing homes and impersonal, expensive rows of apartment houses . . . small homes in the suburbs.

Yet, Washington as I see it is all this and more . . . it is the Women's National Democratic Club, where you will find the members listening to speakers from all the United Nations . . . it's the D. C. League of Republican Women . . . the D. C. League of American Pen Women popping with ideas on how to sell a story . . . The American Association of University Women's Club, scholarly and intellectual . . . Young "grads" of the club flinging dances for officers in the armed services . . . The Political Study Club emphasizing "Latin-American friendship" . . . Professional clubs such as Zonta and Soroptimist studying post-war problems . . . The Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters fighting for District suffrage, attempting to enlighten the public on taxation, inflation . . . Various Jewish women's organizations working day and night to sell more and more war bonds . . . The Red Cross centers humming with activity . . . The D. A. R. making buddy bags . . . A. W. V. S. giving courses in victory farming . . . USO clubs teeming with young girls and soldiers trying to bring mutual entertainment and friendship.

That isn't all—there are society women working earnestly in war jobs, serving as nurses' aides, as plane-spotters, as air-raid wardens . . . White Russians eagerly following the achievements of the Soviet's Red army, still dispensing hospitality on a small scale with the same grace and air with which they might have entertained in a czarist palace . . . old men and women, young girls hurrying to Spanish classes . . . proud Polish refugees pointing to the fact that Hitler has found no Quislings among them . . . Brave Norwegians lecturing at every opportunity against naziism . . . Hundreds of Britishers, some patronizing but most just jolly good folk . . . Men flocking to town on business, getting nowhere and returning home disgruntled . . . Phonies trying to sell everything from new airplane models to Texas oil land . . . Happy women, sad, disheartened ones . . . Tired men who honestly do overwork . . . Lonely girls whose life consists of going to work, returning home to cook, clean apartment, read or gossip with equally lonely roommates . . . Gay girls literally dancing on air with handsome men in uniforms . . . Serious-minded men and women doing all in their power to help win the war . . . A few ragged beggars hawking their postcards and pencils on F Street.

Still I see another Washington . . . Diplomatic parties, some dull, cold and official, others brilliantly gay, with champagne, witty conversation, every diplomat inquiring "Parlez-Vous, francaise? . . . Party patter, greeting the same people you saw at the last party.

Everyone covering up the seriousness of the war situation with trivial talk, yet still looking harassed . . . Uniformed men . . . Women wearing sprigs of flowers in their hair and yards of veiling . . . Writers, artists, poets of all nationalities . . . High-ranking officials . . . Intellectuals, opportunists and idealists . . . Thousands of small-town men and women hungering for "back home" . . . shabbily dressed men and women, others looking like fashion models.

All this is enigmatic Washington, interesting but not to be taken too seriously.

One Summer's Romance

—BY RITA HANSEN—

CHAPTER XII

The door to the dining room opened with a bang and Johnny took one step forward and then stopped, looking embarrassed. "Oh, excuse me," he said lamely, "I always seem to blunder in at the wrong moment. I was looking for supper." He smiled a little and shut the door.

Lisa was terribly angry, without being sure what she was angry about. She put Mark off, and went to her room. But she was too restless to lie down. When it was dark she put on a hat and slipped out the back way. She passed by the lighted study where Johnny was working. For a moment she stared at his bent head. She was afraid if she stared at him too long he'd look up and somehow see her standing out there in the darkness watching him. She walked on, down the hill.

At one corner of the fence a small, thin figure was standing, looking silently out over the valley. She was frightened for a moment because this was a lonely corner of the farm and no one ever came here but herself. Then when she got closer she saw it was Slade.

He said, "Good evening, Miss Lisa," when he saw her. And she said, "Slade, it's damp out tonight. Effie will worry if she knows you're out in the wet grass."

She had never heard irritation in his voice until then. "What do I care if the grass it wet! A man can stand bein' sick just so long, Miss Lisa!"

Lisa had never had much patience with Slade's illness which generally grew worse when there was any work to be done around the farm. She had always suspected an enjoyment in his gentle, patient resignation to his misfortune. It was odd to hear him speaking as he was. She said, "Effie said you'd been in bed all week. I'm surprised she didn't object to your going out."

"She doesn't know I'm gone. She thinks I'm asleep in the bedroom," he said slyly. "I had to get out tonight. Ain't seen the valley by moonlight in a couple of years."

Usually Lisa and Slade had little to talk about except the work he didn't do, but tonight he seemed feverishly anxious to talk, wandering from one subject to another. Finally he said, "I ought to thank my stars for a kind, understandin' wife like Effie . . ."

Lisa sensed something in his tone and she said, "Well, of course, Effie's whole life is taking care of you."

"And yet," he said slowly, "sometimes I almost can't help hatin' her . . ."

"Slade! How can you say that?"

His thin face was flushed suddenly, and he seemed to want to tell her everything at once, to explian. "It ain't just her—it's everything—the way I am now—the way she treats me—Listen, do you want to know something about me? I'm a coward, see, a coward—that's all I've ever been! There's another war now and it reminds me of the first one when I was 21. The boys all went off—even the married ones like your father, but I was scared.

"I'd always been kind of puny and I hoped I'd get worse so they wouldn't take me. I got to believe I was almost dyin'—I married Effie 'cause she was so sweet to me—wantin' to take care of me. She never got over the idea that I wasn't well and it was easier to let her think that. It was easier than goin' out and workin' like a man should. You see how it was—all my life is just bein' scared and runnin'—and now I can't be no different. Effie—"

Lisa said, "It's not too late, Slade. You're not old."

He shook his head. "I'm sick now. It's come in the last few years because I made it real. I asked for it—it's what I deserve, maybe."

Lisa said, "It's getting very cold. You shouldn't stay here, Slade."

He shook himself with an angry gesture of his shoulders. When he started to speak a wracking, rasping cough choked him and left him holding the fence post for support. "I gotta go back—back to Effie and her poultices and sweet words and medicine—I hate 'em all. I can't help it—I hate 'em!"

Lisa offered to walk back with him, but he waved her support away. "Lemme alone. I don't wanna be helped. Just lemme alone." And then after a few slow steps he turned around and said, "I know more'n a bit about you, too, Lisa Alden, seeing you all your life. Don't you run away. Get what you want—or fight for it, even if you never get it. You hear me?"

She nodded. When he was gone she stood by the fence until long after the moon had risen and the dew had soaked through her shoes. The house was dark when she got back.

In the morning she was awakened by a frightened pounding at her door. It was Effie, disheveled and terrified. "Lisa," she gasped, "Oh, Lisa, it's Slade! He's had an attack. He can't breathe and it's been gettin' worse all night!"

They got Johnny up and sent him for the doctor in Feather River. Then Effie went back to Slade, leaving Lisa alone, wandering through the dark rooms with a lost and unutterable melancholy. She knew she would cry if Johnny didn't come soon, and when she heard a car on the drive she ran out joyfully. However, it wasn't Johnny, but Simon Golde, his agent, who had come to check up.

"What's all this he writes me? What's the matter with him?" he demanded of Lisa, waving a letter of Johnny's, "First he starts a play, tears it up, it's lousy! Then after the fire he starting a new one—he says it's terrific! Now he's saying it will never be done, there is no one to do it in New York—he is finished, washed up, and New York is a lousy place, the theater and all the actors in the world are lousy! In fact, the whole world is lousy! Is that what fresh country air in doing to him?"

When Johnny came back with Dr. Grennan they went over to Effie's and sat in her kitchen with her waiting. It was a long day, and all afternoon there was no sound in Slade's room.

And at 6:30 in the evening he died quietly and without any trouble.

Lisa stayed with Effie the rest of the night, trying to comfort her mute, terrible grief. Helpless to tell her too much of Slade's unhappiness, trying to make her see only that he was happier now.

Johnny went home to bed at midnight and the next morning, when she got to the house, he was eating breakfast with Symie. She sat down, breaking into nervous hot tears, for Slade and Effie, and some for herself. Johnny knelt beside her, soothing her. "Don't cry, Lisa—don't be unhappy." After a moment he said, "That was beautiful last night—the way you talked to Effie—something about you—I knew then what I wanted to do!"

She raised her head and looked at him curiously.

"I saw you as all the warm understanding and sympathy on earth, a symbol like the girl in my play—and I thought—Lisa, you're the one person to do it! You can play Jenne—I never saw it before, but if you could put over a scene like that . . ."

She stood up and slapped him as hard as she could in her exhaustion. "You . . . you playwright!" she said hoarsely. "Haven't you any humn feelings at all? You don't think of anything but your play—a man dies and before he's buried you have him writtten into a scene. Oh, I wish you'd never come here! I wish you'd never come!" She ran out of the room, stumbling.

Protect Winter Woolens From Moths

The War Production Board, assures homemakers that they will find an ample supply of moth repellents on the market to protect their winter woolens through the summer months.

With production at about 90 per cent of the prewar rate, there'll be enough moth balls and flakes to do the job, but not enough to waste.

Since war is seriously hampering importation of crude naphthalene, production rests almost entirely with domestic manufacturers. They cannot make quite enough to take care of all the new war needs and all the old needs too.

The current supply of paradichlorobenzene, a sparkling white crystal similar in appearance to naphthalene crystals, and used in the same way, seems adequate.

Readily available for the most part are mothproofing solutions, used to render materials immune from attack by moths. The small quantities of sodium fluoride, cinchona, sulphur, or other chemicals they call for add up to so little that their use for this purpose has not been restricted.

Substitute for Nylons

For the next five months your stocking troubles are over!

Experiments with liquid stockings have improved them greatly, and there's no stigma in wearing them this year. It takes patience, not artistry, to paint yourself a pair of sheer one-threads for evening or a deep copper for sport clothes.

Who minds shortages with these six items to pamper your feet?

Wax Does the Trick

For a successful makeup job, legs must be hair free. One of the most effective ways of removing hair is with wax. The entire hair is removed to the very end and the job won't have to be repeated for five to six weeks. This wax comes in a small aluminum container and can be used over and over again. $2.50. Refills also.

'Make-up' Your Legs

There are dozens of kinds of leg makeup on the market and many of them fine ones. Tried and true is one of the cream lotions that appeared on the market last year and is said to be even better this year. It gives a dull sheen to the legs that's competition for any one-thread sheer (and besides it doesn't wrinkle). Won't rub off or streak—even if exposed to a quick summer shower, $1.

Girdle Anchor

There's even an answer on how to keep your girdle from wandering when you don't wear stockings. This clever item looks just like stocking tops and fits snugly on the legs. Just attach your garters to them! Made of rayon tricot, 79 cents.

For Comfort's Sake—

Wear a pair of cotton stocking feet to protect your feet from rubbing against the shoe. We've found a very good pair of sheer cotton and they still have the elastic bands that holds them snugly on the foot. Buy them a bit larger, as they usually run small. 25 cents.

It's just as important to have a cream for your feet as one for your face—now that you're walking more. If your feet are tired and apt to puff, give them a beauty treatment with this refreshing cream and lotion. $1. each.

Seamy Side

You can even get heels and seams to stamp on your liquid stockings! If you like seams, and aren't so handy with an eyebrow pencil, here's the answer. 25 cents.

A Few Tips:

Smooth makeup upward from the instep, using your hands. Apply makeup at least six inches above the knee.

Please, oh please, remember to make up the back of your leg—especially around the heel. (The dexterity required is good for your waistline, anyway!)

Rub legs down with a soft cloth for a smooth dull finish.

Harmonize your face makeup with your legs.

If caught in a shower, don't touch legs while the skin is still damp. After they dry rub them smooth again.

Sprinkle the insides of your shoes with powder before wearing.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It should be taken for granted that when a small child goes out to play he should be protected by the mother, unless she has delegated that precious responsibility to another mother, to a paid helper or to a child old enough to accept and bear it.

To send a child out to run around the neighborhood, expecting that in whatever yard he stops the mother of the house will feel responsible for him, is an imposition on neighbors and friends and a beckoning gesture toward tragic dangers.

Mrs. E. M. Z. admits that she has a personal "gripe" toward neighbors who expect that God or the neighbors will look after their children, while they take life easy.

"One mother of a 2½-year-old sends her out to play with older children. She is very bad about snatching, crying, interrupting games and fussing. The older children enjoy teasing her just because she makes a fuss. The mother sits at the telephone or reading until the child comes in crying. Then she blames all the other children.

"She has taught her child to hit back when she is hit and I feel she is teaching her pugnaciousness, to be quarrelsome and a bad sport and is failing to teach her diplomacy, understanding or to have a sense of humor.

"This mother never seems able to go out and sit with the children and make any suggestions to get their cooperation. She also keeps this child up until 2 at night and then lets her sleep until noon."

It is plain that this mother is a thorn in the flesh to you. She does sound careless, for no child of this age is able to hold her own with other children. The fact she cannot encourages illtemper and quarrelsomeness

When a child is old enough to play alone it is quite right that she learn to protect herself and not be forced to depend upon her mother. If children are well suited in age their management of their own conflicts, even if a few blows are exchanged, will be more wholesome than if the child runs home to mother for defense and sympathy.

But at this age the child is too young to run the streets, too young to take care of herself, too young, by far, to be playing with much older children.

To be a good neighbor this mother should shoulder the burden of watching her child and its companions when they are in her yard, in exchange for this same kind of service when the child goes visiting. Neither mother should be guilty of imposing on the other. It should be a 50-50 proposition.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Danger—Men Lurking — By Milton Caniff

STRAIGHT SCUTTLEBUTT—GOT IT FROM SPARKS...
DAME COMIN' IN ON 174!
I HEAR SHE'S ONE O' THEM JUNGLE PRINCESSES—LIKE IN THE COMIC STRIPS
QUICK, HIVES, ME HAT AN' STICK—I GOTTA MEET A PLANE!
NO SUFF—THEY SAY SHE'S A BEE-YOU-TEE!
...MAYBE THEY'RE BRINGIN' WAVES TO THIS ISLAND!
OH, BABY—THEY CAN WASH RIGHT OVER ME.
PASS THE WORD TO MR. RYAN AND MR. GOODE THAT WE'RE GOING IN...THE YOUNG LADY WILL BE TAKEN TO THE SICK BAY FOR TREATMENT...
WE'RE JUST IN TIME!...FROM THE MOB ON THE BEACH, IT APPEARS OUR FORCE IS ABOUT TO EVACUATE THE ISLAND...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

I'M TOM TATTLE, MRS. WORTH···I'D LIKE TO TALK TO YOU···IT'S ABOUT PATTI!
I REMEMBER YOU··AND VERY FAVORABLY, YOUNG MAN! COME IN!
I'LL GIVE YOU A FAST FILL-IN! PATTI'S SORE AT ALL OF US FOR TRYING TO ICE HER ROMANCE WITH LOU VARZONI!
SHE THINKS HE'S A MUCH MALIGNED GENTLEMAN···I THINK HE'S THE MEANEST KIND OF A CROOK···AND, WITH YOUR HELP, I'D LIKE TO PROVE IT!
WELL..I'M WILLING···IF THERE'S ANYTHING AN OLD LADY CAN DO···
GOOD! I WANT YOU TO GO TONIGHT AND HAVE YOUR FORTUNE TOLD!

MICKEY FINN — Ah—Romance! — By Lank Leonard

WELL, PHIL—IS YOUR LUCKY CHARM STILL DOIN' ITS STUFF?
OH, YES, CLANCY! I MADE A NICE PROFIT IN AVIATION STOCKS YESTERD—SAY! WHO IS THAT GORGEOUS CREATURE GOING BY?
WHY YOU KNOW HER, PHIL! SHE'S "PINCHIE" O'NEIL'S WIDOW!
BY GOLLY—SHE'S SURE IMPROVED SINCE SHE STOWED OLD "PINCHIE" AWAY!
WELL, "PINCHIE" LEFT HER FIFTY THOUSAND! SHE SHOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO SPRUCE UP ON THAT!
DID YOU SAY FIFTY THOUSAND?
YES! BUT TAKE THAT GLEAM OUT OF YOUR EYE! YOU COULDN'T GET TO FIRST BASE WITH HER!
CLANCY—YOU UNDERESTIMATE MY CHARM!

MR. AND MRS. — Nobody Talks Money Any More — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

DO BE CAREFUL HOW YOU USE THAT CATSUP! IT COST SIX POINTS
OH, GOSH, IS EVERYTHING POINTS THESE DAYS?
YES, OF COURSE. NOT EVEN THE BUTCHER KNOWS THE PRICE OF ANYTHING IN MONEY
I S'POSE I GET PAID IN POINTS AND DON'T KNOW IT
SAIL HO! WHEREAWAY? TWO POINTS ON THE PORT BOW, SIR!
I WISH YOU WOULDN'T YELL LIKE THAT. HOW YOU STARTLED ME!
COULD YOU LET ME HAVE CARFARE? I HAVEN'T ANYTHING SMALLER THAN TWENTY POINTS

DIXIE DUGAN — A New Permanent! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

WHAT HAPPENED?!
OH——BY-RYTHING!
WE'LL HEAR ALL ABOUT IT TOMORROW—TAKE A HOT BATH, DEAR, AND GOODNIGHT!
THANKS, MA
(308!-;308):
THERE, THERE, HONEY—YOU'RE JUST GETTING A REACTION
REACTION?? YOU MEAN I'LL HAVE TO BE GETTING A NEW PERMANENT! (308-308)—JUST LOOK AT MY HAIR!

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

MRS. SMALTZ, I'M IN THE FIXING BUSINESS; HAVE YOU ANYTHING THAT NEEDS FIXING?
I WONDER IF YOU COULD SAW ABOUT THAT MUCH OFF MY OLD IRONING-BOARD.
THAT'S FINE, MYRTLE! I'LL GET YOU TO DO ALL MY FIXING!
THANKS!
I'LL BE OVER RIGHT AFTER LUNCH TO FIX YOUR CHAIR!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Tied Score — By Frank Martinek

AS TORPEDO AND BOMB HIT TARGETS SIMULTANEOUSLY—
SCORE IS TIED FOR SUB AND BOMBER
QUENTIN, THERE'S A BIRD'S-EYE PICTURE OF HOW HELLISH THIS U-BOAT WAR IS...WE'VE GOT TO STOP CUTTING OUR JUGULAR VEIN, WHICH WILL CHOKE OUR SUPPLIES GOING TO THE BATTLE FRONTS.
I WONDER IF AMERICA REALIZES WHAT WE'RE UP AGAINST?
WINSLOW TO PILOT! CALL COAST GUARD TO PICK UP SURVIVORS. QUENTIN, THERE MUST BE AN ANSWER TO THIS, AND WE'RE GOING TO HELP FIND IT!!

JOE PALOOKA — Sniper — By Ham Fisher

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — By Saunders and Woggon

GALE! WHAT IS THAT YOUNG BOMBER PLANT INSPECTOR--ROPER--DOING HERE? SURELY YOU DIDN'T INVITE HIM?
NO, DAD! BUT--HE'S VERY ENTERTAINING! MAY I ASK HIM TO STAY?
YES--YOU MAY---!
I DON'T LIKE THESE PEARLS WITH YOUR COSTUME, MY CHILD! A JARRING NOTE!--I'LL PUT THEM IN THE WALL-SAFE!
NOW, GO TELL ROPER I WANT TO SEE HIM IN THE LIBRARY---ALONE!

JANE ARDEN — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

SORRY I CAN'T TELL YOU A THING NOW—BUT IF YOU'LL COME BACK TOMORROW—
CAN YOU TELL US THEN?
YES I CAN TALK TOMORROW—SHALL WE SAY AT TEN?
THANKS, I WILL BE HERE!
HE'S NOT GOING TO GIVE ME THE BRUSH-OFF THIS WAY—
HERE'S WHERE I STEAL A MARCH ON JANE—

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — By Zono

YER 50¢ AN HOUR IF Y' CARRY IT ON STILTS; 25¢ IF Y' JUST CARRY IT!
I'LL DO IT ON STILTS, I NEED MONEY!
EAT AT JAKE'S
CENTRAL AIRFIELD
WHAT A BREAK! KING WASN'T ON THE MAIL PLANE!--HERE COMES THE INSPECTOR---
--WITH THE PARCEL I'VE BEEN WAITING FOR--AND THE HIDDEN DIAMOND! SUCCESS!
GOOD MORNING, INSPECTOR! WHERE'S--
KING'S BEEN DELAYED, MERRY--TRY NOT TO WORRY, WE'LL LOCATE HIM--OH, YES, HERE'S A PACKAGE.
BUT AT THAT MOMENT, KING IN PIERRE'S REPAIRED PLANE NEARS HEADQUARTERS!--

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

HO-HUM! I ANTICIPATED EXCITEMENT LONG BEFORE THIS!
MORNING...
LOOKS LIKE I SPENT THE NIGHT HERE IN VAIN. I'LL TAKE A PEEK WITH MY X-RAY VISION AND SEE IF COLLINS IS STILL IN DREAM-LAND.
